The Bulletin of Tibetology seeks to serve the specialist as well as the general reader with an interest in this field of Study. The motif portraying the Stupa on the mountains suggests the dimensions of the field.

MENTION OF TIBETAN KINGS IN SOME DOCUMENTS FROM TUNHUANG

Compared with the fundamental contribution to the early history of Tibet in the Annals and Chronicles from Tunhuang the other manuscripts of which a large number are included in the invaluable Chos Documents Tibetans edited by Madame A. Spalman and M. Y. Imaeda although having much of social and administrative importance disclose little about the doings of the btsan-po except in a formal religious context.

There is, however, a strange little fragment Pelliot Tibetan (Pell T) 1144 relating to the ill-fated Stag-bu snyi-gzigs the grand-father of Srong-brits-sgān-po. And in F.W. Thomas Literary Texts and Documents (TLTD) II p.53 the story of the rise and fall of the dynamic arriviste and intriguer Khyung-po Zu-tse who was accused of plotting against Srong-brits-sgān-po. Srong-brits-sgān-po is also named in a religious context together with his descendant Khris-dbang Lde-brits-sgān-po. No. 370 of the collection of Tibetan documents in the India Office Library as having brought the Buddhist doctrine to Tibet.

Khris-dbang Lde-brits-sgān-po is mentioned by implication in TLTD II p.9, a damaged and incomplete account of events in the vassal 'A-chu state where a Tibetan princess had married the ruler in 689 as the ruler who married a Chinese princess in 710. He is also referred to though not by name in the Li Yul Chos-skyi lo Rgyus as the religiously minded Tibetan ruler who married a Chinese princess and gave shelter in Tibet to monks from Khotan.

Khris-dbang Lde-brits-sgān-po is named, as mentioned above, in the India Office Library Document No. 370, "A volume of the Dharma that came down from heaven". He is presumably also the ruler in Pell T. 1091 a fragmentary text which I understand to concern the rising against the Tibetans at Shu-cu in about 797.

Khris-dbang Lde-brits-sgān-po (Ralpacun) is the btsan-po most frequently named in Tunhuang documents. Pell T. 100, although not all legible, appears to be the dedication to him of some religious works by a monk of a temple at Sha-cu, in which he is eulogized in the mystic language of kri-khyip invoking the ancestral Spu-rgyal. In Pell T. 130 he is the benefic- iant of a prayer which mentions his religious acts such as making images and building temples. One of the dangers from which it is prayed he may be delivered-gza'-may mean epilepsy as I suggested in a note in BSOAS 1961. It is known from Chinese sources that he suffered continuously from illness.

Pell T. 132 is a long prayer in which his name appears, almost casually, near the end.
In TLTD II, pp. 93-96, 98 he is associated with the building of a temple in the border region by his generals to celebrate the establishment of peace there.

Pell T. 735 and 1088 which are not in Choix de Documents, name him, in the first, as having religious texts copied for his benefit, and in second which is a small fragment, in association with one of his ministers, Brgya-Byn. Pell T. 1123 is another long prayer for his benefit. Pell 1290 is a rather confused document which has been examined by Madame Spanien in Etudes Tibétaines, pp. 317. It seems to me to be an exercise, copying passages from a number of different documents. In it there is a song by the great monk minister Yoe Tan (Bran-ka spal-gyi yon-tan) on the occasion when the king's name was changed from Mu-tsul to Khri-gtsug lde-brtan. A dragon year of the skyid-stag era which Khri-Gtsug lde-brtan took for his reign following a Chinese model, is mentioned. That should be 828 as 816 would be too early according to the view that he succeeded to the throne in 816. The problem cannot be discussed here.

No. 637 in the India Office Library collection mentioning a dpal 'ha Otsan-po probably refers to him. He is seen as ordering the translation of religious texts by the pandits Jhanagarbra and Cog-no klu'i rgyal-mtshan. The latter is assigned by later histories to the reign of Ralpсан. Finally Pell T. 999 names him together with 'Od-srung as receiving the dedication of copies of religious texts from religious leaders of Shā-cu who also gave a banquet in his honour.

Khri-Gtsug lde-brtan's successor and reputedly dharmakīrti, Khri-'Uj' du-btan is the beneficiary of a long prayer in Pell T. 134 and I take it that he is also the 'U-rum dpal in Pell T. 83 Mille Lalou's Inventaire de manuscrits Tibétains de Touen Fouang. It is not reproduced in Choix de documents so I have not been able to check whether 'U-rum is perhaps 'U-du'i. The brtan-po's name in the Tunhuang Chronicle is given as 'U'i du-btan. These prayers may seem surprising in view of the later reputation of Shāng-darma ('U'i du-btan) as the ruthless persecutor of Buddhism and having continued at the assassination of Ralpсан.

Although the tradition is often confused, there is general agreement that for part of his reign—at least 5 months according to most, but two years in the history of Dpa'-bo Gtsug-Lag. Darma ruled courteously, after which wicked ministers brought about suppression of the faith. In only one of the documents from Tunhuang No. 752 in the India Office collection is there a possible reference to that. A fragment praying that disturbances may cease, ends with the hope that the enemy (or enemies) of the rdzob-rgyug-tsha, the Vajrayana, may be frustrated. On the other hand Pell T. 840 which is edited by Mr. Samten Karmay in a contribution to Tantric studies in honour of R.A. Stein, Louva in 1981, states that the holy religion (Dam-Cho) nourished in the time of the lha-sras Dor-ma and his nephew (Dpon-shag) Od stong.
Perhaps in Central Tibet there was hostility to the practitioners of a particular form of doctrine and it is probable that an end was put to the extensive privileges and donations granted to monasteries by Rabdpan and to the political activities of monks including elevation to the highest offices of state, which had offended the conservative nobility.

But whatever may have happened there, it is evident that Buddhism not only survives in the north-eastern provinces of the Tibetan kingdom but also had the protection of the administration regardless of its persecution in neighbouring China between 842 and 848.

All this time the country was wracked by violent fighting between rival ministers. Shangkunjie of Dba's was out for himself, while Shangpipi of 'bro whose family had long connections with the Tibetan royal house and whose origin was in the neighbourhood of Sha-cu, can be seen as supporting Darma's successor 'Od-srung for whom and for his mother the lady 'Phan prayers continued to be offered.

In Pell T. 999 as mentioned above, 'Od-srungs' name is linked with that of Khri-Gtsug lde-brtson. The religious dignitaries principally responsible for the offering was the abbot Rong-ben (Hong pley) who later led the return of the Chinese of Sha-cu to allegiance to the Chinese Emperor on the collapse of the Tibetan authority in 920. Pell T. 131 is a long, florid, prayer for 'Od-srung and his mother. As it is complete I have translated it below to show the way such things were written. There is also what may be an interesting point near the end in the mention of a brother.

Pell T. 230 is fragmentary prayer also for them. Enough survives to identify it as alluding to the troubles of the time and it seems worth while to attempt a translation I have done below:

Pullot Tibetan No. 131: Offered as a prayer. To the Tathāgatas dwelling in the three ages, and all the Buddhas who have subdued their enemies and are fully perfected in the boundless regions of the world of ten directions, reverence. To these purified by the essence of the doctrine, who are seperated from all action, to those excellent beings who possess the good fortune of natural knowledge and have turned to the way of the highest knowledge, reverence. To the saintly clergy of unchanged nature, the field of merit of all gods and men, to all those spiritual sons who represent the lineage of the Tathāgata wherever they may be to them also reverence. To Tshangs-Pa the lord of all who endure suffering, and to Brgya-byin powerful among the gods who protect the faith of the three ages and maintain the abode of the departed Buddhas wherever they may be, and to those who act as chief of the kings of the gods, reverence. To the four great kings etcetera, the ten protectors of the world who guard the four continents in trust and have promised by their might and magic power over the gods and nagas, the demons and spirits who act to disturb the world, to prevent them from causing confusion and, in order to keep them under control, to maintain and protect the kingdom by their powers, to those generals of the gods, chiefs of the world, to them also reverence. With concentration in our minds presenting to those holy ones offerings, garlands of pure flowers, cymbals, scented incense powder, butter lamps, gifts, dainties, gift riches, horses etcetera, the wealth of gods and men, with whatever errors there may be proceeding from our body, speech or mind being purified by the saints, with honour and respect and further with increasing agreement with the religious edicts in the line of the ancestors of the lha sras which dispel hostility towards the Three Jewels. We all high and low with humble submission saddened by our desires, further confused by the shame of our thoughts, repenting with all our heart and making confession with all the saints as witnesses and praying that we may not act so in future, we have made this vow. We rejoice in all that tends to increase the two-fold accumulation of virtue and pray that all the saints who have achieved deliverance formation by their good deeds may by the power of their compassion not abandon the world and realising in their mind the infinity of the universe, will remain for the sake of sentient beings. And we beg that all those saints who dwell in their appointed abodes will swiftly turn the wheel of the Dharma and guarding all Tibet will give orders for its protection. May phugs pa Pham-thos-sras, the Lord of Lcang Lo Palace, revealing the manner of his dwelling in the centre of Rizab, also come to the world outside and by his power perform the task of destroying by his brawn the Ghos-sbyin hordes and may he take a vow to protect and guard the doctrine of the Buddhas of the three ages wherever it may be found. And may Arya Jam-ba'la, being our support, promise to bestow wealth in the highest perfection on those who seek enjoyment in the world according to their wishes, and from time to time may appear and establish virtue in the world and according to his promise may perform good deeds in addition to those listed. And for the great king of all Tibet who dwells at Lha-dum-bal, Od-srung of the house of the lady queen "Pham, together with his subjects and court we uttering his name and further supporting him by offering our bodies and lives, making this prayer that he may be endowed with all good, pray especially for his protection. It does not turn out well according to our hopes, dedicating it to the brother as we have promised, and giving into your hands the life and dominion of the dza-sras, the mother and son, their subjects and our life and existence also we pray that by your power you will promise to uphold and maintain them and just as we pray, will bestow on them the gift of the wish-fulfilling tree.

Notes
1. dkar-cag is unusual in this context; it is seen elsewhere in early documents as meaning a list of crop payments.
2. This strange statement, if I understand it rightly, seems to imply that she is under threat: "Od-srung and shows also that he had a brother. It is possible that a brother is implied in Pell T. 1132-yum sras mched 'phal gyi snga nas, and yun sras mched 6ung dang 'dra ba'! zha snga nas. This might underlie the later tradition of rivalry by two claimants by different mothers: "Od-srung and Yum, brian. I have questioned the existence of the latter in my article "Who was Yum-brian?" in Phya 1 instances. 1971.
Pelliot T6. 230 measuring 14 cm. by 22 cm is the left part of a manuscript which, judging by examples of complete documents, may have been twice as wide. I have translated what is possible for surviving half lines. Where there are isolated words, unintelligible out of context, I have usually transcribed the Tibetan. The lines, apart from the first, are of virtually equal length.

Insipite of the fragmentary nature of the documents there is enough to allow some reasonable speculation about the contents of the whole. The first six lines are general prayer. In line seven 'Od-srung and his mother, for whose benefit the document is presumably dedicated, are named. The following eleven lines record the religious deeds done by or on behalf of the ruler. The nineteenth line onwards contain several references to disloyal subjects; and the document concludes with prayers for loyalty among subjects and peace and prosperity for the ruler and all Tibet.

This can be seen as referring to the disorder which followed the murder of Gung-darma and the troubled accession of 'Od-srung leading, as recorded in the new Tarq Annals, to fierce fighting in the border regions between Shangk'ungle of Mo (Oba?) and Shanggipa of Muta or Mo lo (Bro?) respectively opponent and supporter of the new regime. That continued until 849 when Shanggipa, whose resources were exhausted, retired to the west of the Kao chou prefecture.

THE LIFE OF SUM-PA MKHAN-PO (1704-1788),
THE CELEBRATED AUTHOR OF DPAG-BSAM LJON-BZAN
(Translated from Dzeh-ther rgya-mtsho)'
— Dr. Sanjit Kumar Sadhukhan

Sum-pa mkhan-po ye-ses dpal-byor was the nephew of bSton-dzin chos-rgyal. In the account of Eri-mthar'i-tshangs-pa skyabs of 'Kokonhor, Sum-pa was born in the Wood Monkey year (A.D. 1704) of the 12th Rab-byah cycle.

Sum-pa read Eri-mti..'s Drag-skor me-lon and learned the rules of the religious practice. When he was admitted into the monastery Thar-sui chos-sknyor rgya-mtsho yzech-dzin was appointed his teacher. Sum-pa acted according to his teacher's instruction and (later) became a very kind lama. He was ordained under an initiator lama (of the Thar-sum monastery) in the Iron Tiger year (A.D. 1710). He was admitted into the school of philosophy of the dGon-lu monastery in the Water-Serpent Year (A.D. 1713) and studied well. At the age of 20 years in the Water-Hare year (A.D. 1723) he heard rdor-phren under dpag-rin Nag-dbang bkra-sigs. He went to sBugs. Staying in the sGo-ma school of philosophy he heard brtse-bshag from dpPhun-slob La-mo nam-mkhas, the first among the eight gBo-bris-s of sTsong-kha-brgyas and the teacher of the two boys. During the winter he began his study of rBar-phyin (Pratipratimittika) in the stream of religion klu-bum-pa Moq-kya 'jam-dbyangs rgya-mtsho became his teacher. At that time, rTa-tshang rie mdrugs, Thon-dog sgo-man spnyul sku, mTag-ris spnyul sku and bTsam-po No-mon-gan came to the school of philosophy (i.e. they joined the school as teachers). In the Fire-Horse year (A.D. 1726) he obtained the degree of glin-ba mkha-bcu.

In brsags-snying dge-phil he heard the explanation of the doctrine from bo-'khyi mtham-dbang pa, mKhar-dod bsrol-pa rgya-mtsho, Shogs Dor-yod mkhas-grub, Chu-mig-lung-pa bla-ma 'jam-dbyangs-pa, and others. Earlier and later he heard a vast number of things from Khre Nam-mklu-bzan, Khre Nag-dbang chos-rtse-dan, Koe-po bKa'-gyur-pa Chos-n-mchun, Silva dmor pa was-rab rgya-mtsho, Sems-rid dam-chos who was the teacher of sBum-lam school, and others. He practiced all those. He learned saI-ba-'Stsha (grammar, composition of verse, etc.) under rDzo-mo mKhar-pa sMon-lam thun-grub, the disciple of Pra'i dge-bses, Sum-bcu-pa (of sTshom mi) under bsMigs-blo-mthun skye 'bum monastery and various arts of writing (dru-can, dby-med, etc.) and geometrical measurement under bTsun-pa mi-tshang-pa Thas-grags-thun-grub. He practiced two varieties of astrological calculation, one for human benefits and the other for bringing harm to the human beings, from Lha-dbañ-pa, who was the district officer of skyor-mo-lun and also the personal disciple of the regent (of Tibet), and Sog-ram-pa Nag-dbañ rgya-mtsho who was the discipline of Lug-mgo bla-mikhyen Nag-dbañ, and who used to teach Baidunya dbar-po (an astrological text of sDe-srid Sangs-rgyas rgya-mtsho).

While out on a pilgrimage in the Fire-Horse year (A.D. 1726) he visited Tsa-ri and Dab-'brul-ba rtsa-'mchog grom in Tsa ri-bab-skor. In the southern side, in rGya-n-rin-kho he visited a very high mountain which was called Sa-mi-svar by the 6ar-yas and rGya-gar se-nge by the Tibetans.

In the Iron-Pig year (A.D. 1731) he came back to his own country. He got the initiation of Dus-khor (Kaalacakra deity) from the great scholar dGe-dun don-grub. He received religious instructions from Khri-chen sprul-sku, dKa-chen smon-lam-pa, Tshis-kas-silags-rim-pa, etc. in La-mo bde-chen monastery. He inquires about the religious advice on 3man-nag, etc.
which successively came down to Gro-tshab brag sprul-pa's-skru from Kunmikhyen goh-ma (Jam-dbyangs bsad-pa Nag-dban brtson-'grus). He gave dRor-pheph initiation in dGa'-ldan bsad-sgrub gili (a monastery) in the Dragon year (A.D. 1736).

In the Fire-Serpent year (A.D. 1737) he went to China and praised the Emperor. In the Earth-Horse year (A.D. 1738), while staying near the river called San-li behind ITsheo-bdun temple, he saw that rJe-brisun tham-pa'i sprul-sku who was the son of Hais-ha don-grub was driven away by the army of Cun-gar.

In the Earth-Sheep year (A.D. 1739) he came back to Tibet. In the Iron-Monkey year (A.D. 1740) he got d Gon-lun ri-khrod (a cave monastery), congregation halls of two bDe-skrid sgrub-sde of Zva-kho and dGon-lun dGa'-ldan lha-rtsa built. He got Sri-gyon 'bum-pa chen-po and Sum-pa'zin-yan temple along with dMar-gtsan temple repaired. He got the huge statue of the Maitreya Buddha, built in the big temple of dGon-lun.
He got small temples and 3 other statues, built at the left and right sides of that temple of Maitreya. He got the great shrines built on the low land just in front of the monastery. In the Water-Dog year (A.D. 1742) he went to Pe-cih (the capital of China) and came back in Pig year (A.D. 1743). After five years he got a temple with images etc. built in Bo-sog-thu monastery of Po-kho. He became abbot of this monastery in the Fire-Tiger year (A.D.
1746). With this term and two more terms before and later it he became abbot for three times in total. In the Iron-Horse year (A.D. 1750) he went to Ril-bo rtsa-lha. He also became abbot of the following monasteries:
bKra-'sde chos-glin, Ser-lun, Brug-lun, Dul-ba dgon, dGa'-ldan rin-chen glin, Pho-rod pra-sde's dgon, etc.

He composed many works, including a history of the doctrine called dPag-bsam ljon-bzañ among the rTsis literature his dGe-ladan rTsiš gsar is very famous.
It is the previous story that when Pan-chen thams-cad mkhyen-pa stayed in sKu-bum monastery, Sum-pa approached him in an auspicious moment and heard many things on medicine, tantra, the properties and various natures of the king, minister and army of the barbarians. At times he heard the nature of birds and animals like tiger etc.

He assembled many disciples as Thu'u-bkvan-rin-po-che did. When Sum-pa was paying homage to the tomb of rje Nag-dba chos-kyi rgya-mtsho, a small piece of thread like thumb in size fell inside the tomb. It is said that Sum-pa took that piece of thread into his mouth and as a result of this he got a long life and also became a very rich man. He died at the age of 85 years in the Earth-Monkey year (A.D. 1784). Kun-mphyen Bar-ma worshipped the shrine of his tomb.

Sum-pa had his autobiography. There Sum-pa is generally found to be famous among the names of the eighteen great castles of Tibet. This very Sum-pa also prepared 100 sets of 106-volume Kanjur written in gold by the order of the mother of the King of L. van-li of Chims. At his request to the King the temples were built in a large number in the Amdo country and the zones with their fixed worship places were settled.

Notes:

1. I have used the printed edition of this work entitled Histoire Du Bouddhisme Dans L'Amdo Published by Imprimé Pour L'école Pratique des Hautes Études, Paris.

2. In the text the year is clearly mentioned as Water-Monkey i.e. A.D. 1752 but it is absurd. It will be Water-Serpent i.e. A.D. 1713. Sum-pa in his autobiography mentions the 9th year of his age as the year of his admission into dGon-lun.

3. Though in the text the year is clearly mentioned as Earth-Serpent i.e. A.D. 1749 but from the fact that he returned in the Iron-Pig year i.e. A.D. 1731 can by no means justify the former year of his pilgrimage. It should be the Fire-Horse Year i.e. A.D. 1726 and also it is justified by the statement in Sum-pa's autobiography, "at the age of 22nd year".

4. Full title of this oft-quoted work is "Phags-yul rgya-nag chen-po bod dan sog-yul du dam-po'i chos-byin-ished dpag-bsam ljon-bzan. It is written in 1748 and contains 317 folios of large format. It comprises the first volume of the Complete Works of the author.

It contains a brief history of China (fols. 288a1-292b6) and of Buddhism in China (fols. 292b7-300b2). It also gives a short account of the history of the Mongols (fols. 300b2-312b2) and of the history of the spread of Buddhism among them (fols. 312b2-316a1).

6. This is the second Panchen Lama Pan-chen blo-bzaṅ ye-śes (1663-1737).
The success of Chengiz Khan (1167-1227) in conquering China facilitated his success to establish a new dynasty called the Yuan dynasty (1260-1368) to rule China for more than a century. That was political. In the cultural history of East Asia, it could bring forth a substantial effect when Buddhism integrated China, Tibet and Mongolia. This was of no less importance than the contribution of the preceding dynasties, viz., the T'ang dynasty (618-907), The Five Dynasties (907-960) and the Song dynasty (960-1279) in China. During these dynasties, Buddhism flourished under the patronage of the rulers amidst upheavals and encounter with Confucianism, Daoist and other systems of thought. The rulers of the preceding dynasties were participants of a cultural change through the ages, whereas to the Yuan rulers, Buddhism was foreign though not alien. Now we shall deal in details with the historical background of the Yuan court and the Tibetan priests patronized by the court to spread Buddhism among the Mongols.

The Mongols are referred to in the “Secret History” (Yuan Ch'ia Bi Shh) at the “Da-da (Tartars) as distinguished from the other steppe tribes or tribal unions.” The Yuan period marks the period of integration of Chinese with the Mongols. The Mongols with their own idiosyncrasies and temperaments, manifested their adaptability in different circumstances while ruling the Chinese people. The Mongol rulers thus imbibed Chinese culture to a great extent and evidences may be cited to prove the cultural advancement of China during the Mongol rule.

Measures were adopted by the Chinese intelligentsia to safeguard their traditions and heritage inspite of the intrusion of the Mongols politically. The Yuan court also preferred to retain the merit points of the Chinese, though the latter was subjugated forcibly, such mutual understanding paved the way for the above mentioned cultural advancement later on alien outlook towards the Mongol rulers was generated among a section of the Chinese which led to the decline of the dynasty. Thus the orthodox outlook of medieval socio-religious traits among the people of China and Mongolia continued until they came into contact with the West during the late nineteenth and early twentieth century.
Invitation of Tibetan scholars to the Yuan Court

The inviting of Tibetan Buddhist priests by the Mongol rulers began during the reigns of the Grandsons of Chengiz Khan. Koden, alias Godan was the first to invite the Sakya Pandita Kun-dga' rgyal-mtshan (1162-1251) the head of the Sa-skya (tawny soil) sect. Sir Herbert Franke has pointed out that these exist considerable disparity in the extant versions of the letter written by Godan to the Sakya Pandita. The purpose of the invitation was to preach Buddhism to his subjects and to keep the promise of his deceased ancestors. Valuable tributes were sent along with the letter. According to Gos-lotsa' ba, Sakya Panchen (Sakya Pandita) visited the court of Godan in Kansu in 1244. This incident marks an epoch of theocratic rule in China. A chronological table of the Sakya Pandita's family is given below:

Dpal-chen Od Po (1165 A.D.)
(Kun-dga' rgyal-mtshan (b 1162 A.D.)
(Youngest)
Phyag na (b 1239 A.D.)
Phag Pa bla ma (b 1235 A.D.)
Acarya Rinchen (b 1238 A.D.)

Besides the priests of the Sakya-pa sect, scholars from the Karma-pa sect (a Tantric school of Buddhism meaning “action, service”). Kublai Khan himself personally invited Karma Pakshi, a monk of the Karma-pa sect to his court though the essentially favoured the Sakya-pa sect and Phag-pa had secured his goodwill by his talent and excellence. After Kublai Khan’s reign, Tibetan preceptors of the Karma-pa sect were invited to the Mongol court and the Karma-pa sect of Tibet rose in importance in place of the Sakya sect.
Patronization of Kublai Khan

Kublai Khan (1215-1294), successor of Godan, further established contacts with the Sakya priests by inviting the nephew of the Sakya Pañjita (vide table given below) called Bla-gros rgyal-mtshan alias Phag-pa (1235-1286), an expert on Buddhist doctrines of the Sakya sect and Tibetan grammar. Phag Pa not only set up a firm base for Tibetan Buddhism in China, but was also instrumental in winning the support of the Mongol rulers. He was appointed the spiritual preceptor (di-shi) of Kublai Khan, who conferred great honours upon him. As a Buddhist scholar, he provided the Mongols with a pseudo-historical legitimating theory, and also invented an alphabet for writing pre-classical Mongolian still known as the phag-pa script.

Phag-pa returned to Tibet from the Yuan court in the year 1265 and after staying there for about three years he again left for China in the year 1269.

In the year 1269 Phag-pa received instructions to invent a script for the Mongols which we have just mentioned. In 1278 he wrote a brief dogmatic treatise for Zhen Jin (1243-1295), Kublai’s son and heir apparent, this book dealt with the basic creeds of the Sakya sect. The work entitled “what one should know was later translated into Chinese under the name “Zhang suō Zhī lún” by Su-pa (Chin, Sha-lo-pa 1259-1314) and included in the Chinese Buddhist Tripiṭaka, Phag-pa further accomplished the prodigious task of rendering the venomous Tibetan canon into Mongolian together with his associates after careful comparison with the Chinese versions through the imperial court. During the reign of King Yesun Temur (1324-1328) the Tibetan Sakya Lama Shes-rab-seng-ge translated a large number of texts into Mongolian. Among other translators were Son-ston, and his other noted disciples such as Das-Pa Ablunhansili, Shaöpa, Dayiöpa, Kabunadasi, etc. Phag-pa returned to the Sakya monastery in 1277 at the age of 42 on the occasion of the Buddhist assembly at Chu Mig in the next year. He spent his last days in Tibet and passed away in 1280 A.D. at the age of 45.

After the death of Phagpa, two other Tibetan priests called Chos Kyi ‘Od-Zer and Gyuvin ston-rdo-rje dpal came to the Yuan Court. Chos-kyi ‘Od-Zer devised a kind of script for the Mongols besides translating from Sanskrit a philosophical poem “Bodhi carry” written by Santideva and writing a commentary on it. Gyuvin ston-rdo-rje dpal besides being the teacher of Bu-ston Rimpochhe (1290-1364) expounded the Kālacakra along with other Tibetan scholars such as Shes-rab-seng-ge. Son-ston rdo-rje gyal-mtshan (one of the translators of the Kālacakra among several others) who also translated the Kavyāśāra, Avadāna Kalpalatā and other texts into Tibetan and was brother of Dapan blo-btšem Pa. The later two are considered to be the founders of philosophical studies in Tibet. Shes-rab-seng ge is said to have copied the Tantra section of the Bka'-'gyur and the Vinaya.

Spread of Buddhism in Mongolia

It seems strange that the Buddhist attitude of service to humanity won over the cruel hearts of the Mongol rulers. Apparently the magic rituals and doctrines of the Tibetan esoterics attracted the Mongol rulers as a device for administration, and on the other hand, the Tibetan scholars considered it profitable to associate themselves with the Mongol rulers from the political point of view. During the Yuan period, many scholars from Mongolia came to China and took up the work of translating Buddhist texts into Mongolian after receiving imperial orders. Some of these were honored with the highest religious title of "Guo-shih" (Imperial Preceptor). The Uighur script derived from the Syriac, was extensively used for translation into Mongolian. The use of this dialect for Buddhist texts became prevalent after the Uighurs founded a kingdom in the 9th century and texts in Uighur were printed in Beijing in 1330.

One of these Mongolian scholars was Kaludanasi, who was conversant with Buddhist philosophy and all the local dialects. He had studied Buddhism and Tibetan under Phag-pa at imperial orders and later took up the work of translating Sanskrit and Tibetan sūtras into Mongolian which was completed in 1294.

Another noted Mongolian scholar was Bilannashiri from Kanmila. He received the title of Guo-shih in 1331. In the year 1312 he received imperial orders to translate Buddhist texts. He translated a number of well-known sūtras, such as the Leng-Yan Jing (Sarangama-samādhi), Da Cheng Zhuang Yan Bao Da Jing (Kārāḍa Vyūha sutra) the Da Nie Pan Jing (Mahāparinirvāṇa sūtra) and others.

Aluhunsali (1245-1309) was another Mongolian scholar. He also learnt some local dialects from phag-pa and translated Buddhist sūtras.

Translations of Buddhist texts continued during the reign of Emperor Buyantu Khan (Ren Zong; 1312-1320) who ordered, the entire Tripitaka to be copied in golden letters. The Classic of Filial Piety (Xiao Jing) was also translated into Mongolian by imperial orders with a preface by the Emperor Objeiu "temur (Cheng Zong) (1295-1307). Buddhism thus spread to Mongolia by means of translations. The work of translation was completed later in the reign of Legi Idan Khanulku Khagan (1604-1634) by numerous scholars under the guidance of Kun-dga-oden. Sir Charles Eliot has remarked "It looks as if the first growth of Mongolian Buddhism was part of a political system and collapsed together with it."
Buddhism in China during the Yuan rule

On the whole, Buddhism was greatly patronized during the Yuan dynasty. Kublai Khan favoured all religions except Daoism. Buddhism especially appealed to him as a religion that would enable him to subjugate his subjects, special emphasis was laid on the printing of the Buddhist canon. During the reign of Obojetu Temur (Cheng Zong) (1296-1309), the sa-nyan-bstan-'gyur (Nanthang Tanjur) were collected and printed from Beijing at the initiative of the Yuan court after compilation by Bu-ston Rinpoche in 1110. Various editions of the Bstan-'gyur (Tanjur and Bka'-gyur (Kanjur) were subsequently prepared. During the reign of Kublai Khan, a new collection of the Chinese Tripitaka (the ninth) was published in 1285-1287, large sums of money were expended for the purpose of printing.

Numerous Buddhist monasteries were also built during the Yuan dynasty. Large sums of money were also expended for the building of monasteries and as grants for them. These monasteries built within Beijing and outside the city between 1270 and 1354 are Da-hu-huo Renwang Ssu, Shengshou Wanan Ssu Da-long Xiangji Qing Ssu, Da-je Hsi Ssu, Da shou Yuan Zhong gud Ssu, and Shu Xiang Ssu. In the Shou An Shan Fo Ssu built in 1331, a bronze statue of the Sleeping Buddha was carved. After these monasteries were built a number of about three hundred monks are said to have been stipulated for each monastery, and large plots of land were donated for monasteries by the imperial court. A census taken at the end of the thirteenth century records over 42,000 Buddhist temples and 213,000 monks in China. Injunctions were also issued for the chanting of Buddhist texts in the monasteries. The shamanistic element added to the popularity of Tibetan Buddhism. During the Yuan period, a number of politically motivated secret societies claiming connection with Buddhism also became very active such as the Maitreya society, the white cloud society and White Lotus society. Buddhist, shamanistic and confucianist rituals were simultaneously performed during the Yuan dynasty.

Sino-Tibetan relations

The priest and patron relationship that began with Kublai Khan and Phag-Pa, continued in the subsequent period between the Manchu Emperors and the Dalai Lama till the end of the Qing dynasty in 1911. The relationship between Goden and the Sakya Pandita has been described as that between lord and subject, while that between Kublai Khan and Phag-Pa has been described as that between patron and lama by T. W. D. Shakkappa. The patron-lama relationship helped to develop a spiritual-temporal alliance with Tibet which has been maintained over the centuries. After the supremacy of the Sa-skya sect through the centuries, while attempting to depose the less influential sects, it finally declined with the fall of the Yuan dynasty and the installation of the Ming dynasty in 1368. The Gelugpa

(School of Pure Discipline) took the place of the sa-skya in the Ming dynasty, the name being changed by Tsong-Kha-Pa from the 'Kadam sect (Teachings of Atisa) introduced by Atisa in 1039. The Ge-Lugpa on 'Virtuous order originated at the Gaden (Dga' ldan) monastery near Lhasa set up by Tsong-Kha-Pa, who was an eminent philosopher of medieval Tibet. The Gelugpa sect soon acquired supremacy over all the other sects, maintaining it for several centuries till the present day. It spread from Tibet to Mongolia, emerging as a powerful theocratic government.

While comparing the viewpoints of various Chinese and Western scholars from different sources on the impact of the Tibetan priests in the Yuan Court Sir Herbert Franke,20 has noted that a majority of the scholars have recorded negative assessments about them. The reason was that the common people were indignant about the huge sums of money spent by the Mongol rulers in honouring the Tibetan priests and the costly rituals which these priests apparently caused the Mongol rulers to indulge in. The nationality of the priests apart from being Buddhist further aroused severe criticism from these scholars. In the opinion of Sir Herbert Franke himself, who however, expresses doubts as to whether the Tibetan priests actually ruined the national economy, though he holds them partially responsible for the early downfall of the Yuan dynasty. Sir Charles Eliot also agrees with this view.21 It may be added that without the Tibetan priests of the Yuan Court, the story of Chinese history in the medieval period would have been a totally different one.
