their relatives got together and for twenty one days they celebrated his birth on a large scale. Then they discussed on the name to be given to him. As the child was obtained by supplication to gods (Lha dpang-du Phang-nas Thob-pa) he was given the name of dpang-nas-skyes. Therefore, some made mention of him as the Brahman son Maudgalyayana, while others made mention of him as the Brahman son dpang-nas-skyes.

He was put under the care of eight nannies who nursed him with milk, curd, butter, the froth of the butter and other principal items because of which he grew up quickly like a water-lily. On attaining adolescence, he was taught by his father on alphabet (Yi-ge) arithmetic (Grii-ma), and astrology (rTais) and became an erudite master. He learned quickly the wisdom of the Vedas and became a man of transcendent genius in elucidating and overwhelming the opponents.

Overwhelmed with joy the Brahman Grur-Dzin felt that his son has acquired a great discriminating awareness. He therefore entrusted him with some five hundred Brahman boys and made him to study the secret Brahmanical doctrine (Brum-nga’ gSang-tshig).

CHAPTER-III

THE RENUNCIATION OF HOUSEHOLD AND EMBRACING MONKHOOD BY ARYA SHARIPTA AND ARYA MAUDGALAYANA

When the Brahman son Nye-rgyal, also known as Shariputra was teaching to five hundred disciples on the secret Brahmanical doctrine in Nahanda, at the same time the Brahman boy dpangs-nas-skyes, also known as Maudgalyayana was also teaching to five hundred boys on the secret Brahmanical doctrine at Shing-thag-can in Maguulha (rgyal-po’i-khang), and also at the same time the festival of the Naga Raja Rik-be and Yid-hong was being observed, which they also attended. In the midst of the distinctive sounds of music, the artists performed songs and dances accompanied by the musical instrument Tok-tra’ka. But the two Brahman son remain unaffected by the toise. This was noticed by the assembled people who commented ‘the two Brahman son are either a great fools or a great persons of steadfast awareness’. After musical show was over, people proceeded to their respective homes singing and dancing. The dpangs-nas-skyes asked Nye-rgyal whether he perceived the dances, an elegant songs, and an elegant sounds of musical instrument. To which Nye-rgyal answered, ‘those who had seen and heard must had perceived but whose senses were unaffected would not perceived them’. He then said how he could not perceived the sound.

‘To the dead skin of the musical instrument, the laughter and the charms of those assembled here who are destined to die.'
Which wise person would act indiscreetly?"

When the first Brahmac asked the other whether he is Nye-rgyal, he said the people called him by that name. Similarly, when Nye-rgyal asked whether he is dpal-nams-skyes, he said the people called him by that name.

Then Nye-rgyal told dpal-nams-skyes to join him as they have a common faith only in the supreme enlightenment, they would renounce the household and embrace monkhood (Sansk: Shrānyavā/ Tib: Rab-tu -byung). But dpal-nams-skyes replied: "Oh Brahmins son!, for whom religious services and sacrificial rituals are performed. With pains taking effort, title of royal priesthood is at my palm. In addition, we are born to a class esteemed to ride an elephant. Why should we embrace monkhood?"

Nye-rgyal then said:

"When the tree collapse to pieces,
What is the use of branches and leaves?
Similarly when the man dies,
what is the use of all that he possessed?"

He told dpal-nams-skyes to join him as they have a common faith only in the supreme enlightenment, they would renounce the household and embrace monkhood. The dpal-nams-skyes said he would seek his parents permission to do so. After approaching his parents he told them this as he had faith only in the supreme enlightenment he would renounce the household and embrace monkhood. But they told him: "To whom the religious services and sacrificial rituals are made. With pains taking effort, title of royal priesthood is at your palm and being born to a class esteemed to ride an elephant, why then embrace novicihood." dpal-nams-skyes then said:

"By covering with the bark of a tree and grasses,
By sustaining on the roots and fruits,
By living in harmony with the ferocious animals.
I will be emancipated from the next birth
The wise man should not commit to killing, binding and thrashing for the sake of kingdom.
which is a cause that binds to transmigration".

His parents told him that he was the only son and very dear to them, who was good looking, who was pleasing to them and therefore they could not bear the separation from one who was very much alive for them. But he told his parents that if they did not grant his wishes he would go without food. Nevertheless, they told him so long as he was alive he should live with them and not to contemplate upon any other things.

When dpal-nams-skyes went without food for several days, his parents went to him and told that he was very young who wishes for happiness, that he had not experienced suffering, that to live in chastity is difficult, and to abide alone in a solitary place is suffering. Therefore, they told him to come back, to live with them, and to do whatever he wished for. Despite their persuasion he remained steadfast. At last his friends went to his parents and told them that if he died young it would be a great loss for them; that by renouncing the world he would be eulogized by the wise man; that by allowing him to embrace novicehood they could see him alive for whom there is no other than parents to see his welfare. Upon beseeching them to grant his wishes, they ultimately gave their consent and told their son dpang-nas-skyes that the time for his renunciation had arrived.

By reviving his health upon rice soup (bras-khu), he gradually became energetic, powerful and diligent. Subsequently, he moved from Sing-thag-can to Nalanda where nye-rgyal in solitude was teaching to some five hundred Brahman boys on the secret Brahmanical doctrine. When dpang-nas-skyes reached Nalanda, he went to nye-rgyal and told him to join him as they have a common faith only in the supreme enlightenment. They would renounce the household and embrace monkhood. Nye-rgyal asked him whether he had obtained the consent of his parents. He said, "yes". Then Nye-rgyal said, "let me also seek the consent of my parents. Till then wait here".

In order to get the consent of his parents Nye-rgyal went to them and expressed that as he has a faith only in the supreme enlightenment, he would renounce the household and embrace monkhood. Having received the consent of his parents, Nye-rgyal went to dpang-nas-skyes and said that as they have a common faith only in the supreme enlightenment, they would renounce household and embrace monkhood. They then proceeded to Magadha.

At that time there lived in Magadha the six religious teachers like rdoogs-byed who although not qualified as an omniscient being, nevertheless thought so out of pride. Nye-rgyal and dpang-nas-skyes approached each of these erudite masters and asked about their doctrinal method, the instructions given to the disciples, the fruit of the vows of changtay, and the merits incurred therein. rdoogs-byed told them that his principle vows were such that the welfare activities like charity, offering and sacrificial ritual are useless as he believed that there is neither such a result of moral or immoral conduct to be matured after death nor did he believe in the existence of this world or the next world nor did he believe in the existence of father, mother and a miraculous birth of a sentient beings.

The two Brahmans sons felt that this erudite master has dwelt in an erroneous path and vicious conduct which undermined the truth and disowned by the wise. Then they recited a line as follows:

"The master with a vicious thought and an erroneous doctrine may be called an infidel master.
If these are his religious principles than what could be his irrational elements?".

Like striking an empty vessel they found no substance in his doctrine and left him. They went towards the four other masters in succession and asked about their doctrinal method and the merits incurred therein. But they found that these erudite masters also dwelt in an erroneous path and in a vicious conduct to be disowned by the wise man. Without having found any substance in them which was like striking an empty vessel they proved nonsense and left them too.

Finally, they went towards the direction of sixth heretical master Yangdag rgyal-ba-can and asked about his doctrinal method, the instructions given to the disciples, and the merits incurred there in. Yang-dag rgyal-ba-can told them that he regards truth and non-injury (Mtsho-bran) as his doctrine and that the state of peace-fullness, non-aging, deathless and non-declination as the attainment of Brahmahood (Ishamps-pa).

When asked to elucidate the meanings of those utterances the Upadhyaya said that the truth means realization of the truth by becoming an ascetic. Non-injury means the basis of all dharms which arise from non-injury. The state of peacefulness, non-aging, deathlessness and non-declination are the categories related to the Nirvana state.

The Brahmahood means if one attains Nirvana in this life would be better and if not, one was assured to go to the world of Brahma and ultimately one might take the vow of Mahayana teaching and attains Nirvana.

Both of them expressed with great joy that if permitted, both of them would strive for that stage of Brahmahood. After they were ordained the Upadhyaya entrusted them with some five hundred Brahmans boys and made them to study the secret Brahmansical doctrine.

After some time when Yang-dag rgyal-ba-can became indisposed dPangs-nas-skyes attended upon him, and Nye-gyal sought medicine for the master. Despite all the medical care this condition deteriorated. Then Nye-gyal told Upadhyaya that whatever modest religious rites they have received were mainly directed to seek for the essence and for which he asked the master to bestow upon them some of that which he possessed. Whereupon, the Upadhyaya told him in the same manner that whatever modest religious rites he also received were mainly directed to seek for the essence which he has not found even a little despite his every endeavour. Thereafter, in his fifteenth day of fasting (Sansk: Poshady/Tib: gSo-bbyong) he heard a voice of gods wandering in the air, who predicted that the Buddha Sakyamuni was born near the hermitage of sage Kapila (Ser-skya) on the bank of river Bhagirath, who has been foretold by a Brahmans that if he resides in the palace he shall become a Universal King (Sansk: Cakravarthya) who shall conquer the four corners of the world; and if he becomes Dharma Raja he shall shaves the hair and beard and shall put on the saffron colored robe and because of his firm belief in the supreme enlightenment, shall renounce the household and embrace monkhood and shall become famous as Tanagatha-Arhat Sanyak-sam-Buddha (De-bzhin gSlebs-pa (Clipa-gcom-pa Yang-dag-par-rDoogs-pa/ Saiga-rgyas). After hearing the divine voice, the master said, "now both of you go to him and take refuge in his Dharma and get ordained. Make yourselves: devoid of all feelings of caste, creed and pride, and then by practising moral conduct under his observance you will definitely get a pure essence". It was thus foretold.

The end of the accumulation is exhaustion,
The end of the exalted people is to fall,
The end of the association is separation,
The end of the living is death

31
Having said so Yang-Dag rgyal-ba-can passed away. Then two Brahman sons performed the religious rite and carried the dead body covered with white, yellow, red and blue cloth to the cremation ground and cremated the dead body with due observance of the mourning ceremony and left the place.

Later, dpang-nas-skyes felt that Nye-rgyal by virtue of his great wisdom may obtain the essence and would not share it with him. He therefore told him to set a condition that whoever obtains the essence first, the other would get the equal share. With this agreement they proceeded to the valley.

At that time the Buddha Sakyamuni, notwithstanding the fact that he was attaining the age of 29 years, was disillusioned towards the worldly pleasures and on encountering old age, sick and a dead man, he got disillusioned and went to the forest at midnight. At the brink of river Niran江区 he underwent penance for six years. At the end he took curd from Sujata (Cow woman), revived his health which glittered like gold. Thereafter, he took a grass of golden colour from the grass seller Tashi and proceeded to the Bodhi tree in Bodh Gaya. Without shaking the grass he spread it into a cushion and seated on it cross-legged with upright posture in a steadfast concentration. Having generated a mind he thus uttered:

"As long as the enlightenment is not attained so long the cross-legged posture will never be unfolded".

In the course of time the Buddha Sakyamuni had completely subdued three hundred millions devil Byung-po and sixty millions of rs attendant at first hour of the night through his benevolent power and attained the supreme realization. At the behest of Brahman Deva he went to Varanasi where he taught to the five early disciples (khor-lnga-sde bzAng-Po), the four noble Teaths (Sams: Carvati Aryan-sayatira/Tib: 'Phags-pa'i bDen-pa-bzhig) three times through twelve different ways and thus turned the Wheel of Dharma (Sams: Dharma-chakrawartan/a/Tib: Chos-kyi 'Khor-lo bskor-ba).

Afterwards, he went to the Gaya Gauri stupa and gave counsel to one thousand monks by displaying three different miracles, thereby, he not only delivered them from the sufferings of transmigratory existence but also achieved in putting them on the ultimate path and to the Nirvana of supreme bliss.

After proceeding to the grove of s'gang-brang, the king Binbisaara of Magadha, eighty thousand Devas, the Brahman of Magadha and several thousand lay people were placed in the truth. Thereafter, the Buddha Sakyamuni moved to Rujigir (rgyal-po'i-khab) and took his abode in the bamboo grove of Bysa-ka-las-da-ka.

When the two Brahman sons Nye-rgyal and dpang-nas-skyes were wandering in the valley, the Buddha Sakyamuni who disowned even the slightest of such as not knowing (Mi-mkhyen-pa), not seeing (Ma-grigs-pa), unawareness (Ma-rig-pa), and completely not knowing (Nam-par Mi-mkhyen-pa) saw through his divine eye that they possessed a developed mind and great merits as a result of an accomplishment on the fundamental virtues and as a result of virtuous deeds rendered to the past Buddhism. He felt that the opportune moment for them to be disciplined had arrived. Through his intuition he was able to find out to discipline them by himself or by the Samana (Nyon-thos). He found that it would be the Samana who would discipline them. Again to initiate them by the miraculous transformation (rDzus-phral) or by the moral conduct (sPhyod-lam) he found that it would be the moral conduct which would discipline them. Therefore, the Buddha commanded to one of his disciples called "tTa-thul" who had profoundly influenced god and human being through his moral conduct, to bring Nye-rgyal and dPhang-nan-skyes into his fold, tTa-thul accepted the command of the Buddha without uttering a word, bowed down at his feet and then he left for the assignment. Early in the morning, the venerable tTa-thul had put on the religious robe and was carrying his alms bowl. As an embodiment of supreme moral conduct he proceeded for alms in Magadhā.

At that time Nye-rgyal was in Magadhā for certain obligation. When he saw the venerable tTa-thul wandering with his religious robe and alms bowl with an excellent moral conduct, he was so drawn towards him, that he asked the venerable as to who was his teacher, for what reasons he embraced monkhood, and what doctrine he follows. The venerable told Nye-rgyal that among the Sakya sens there lived a Samana (dGe-sbyang) Gautama with the hair of the head and beard shaved clean, who put on a saffron coloured robe, and because of his firm belief in the supreme enlightenment alone, had renounced the household and embraced monkhood, and in his supreme and the most perfect Samadhi (rDzogs-pa) Byang-chub he became fully enlightened (mNgon-par rdZogs-pa Sangs-ngyas-pa). That Buddha was his teacher for whom he embraced monkhood and followed his doctrine. When Nye-rgyal asked him to deliver a teaching on that doctrine the venerable told him he was unable to do so as he was also been initiated recently into it and therefore could not explain in great length the doctrine of the Bhagavat-Tathagata-Arhat-Sunyak-sam-Buddha (bChon-mdan-das De-bzhin gShegs-pa dGra-bcom-pa Yang-dag-par rdZogs-pa'i Sangs-rgyas). Nye-rgyal however asked the venerable to impart him a few accents of fundamental contents of the doctrine. Whereupon the venerable tTa-thul said:

"All the phenomena originated from their cause.
All their cause and method of prevention, are being enunciated by the Tathagata himself.
Such greatness is he who preaches thus".

At that very moment Nye-rgyal attained the realization that all the phenomena is essentially pure and free from the impurities. By virtue of having seen, heard, conceived and arrived at the depth, he overcame doubt and uncertainty. He triumphantly overcame fear, stood up from his seat, threw the shawl over the shoulder, and with folded hand towards the direction of venerable tTa-thul he said:

"This is the doctrine of the saviours. Throughout the several millions of Kalpas."
Such is not seen or heard in former times.
The immortality and the freedom from suffering.
This is the state to which I do follow*.

He then enquired the venerable as to where the Buddha resided. The venerable told him that he resides in the bamboo grove of Bya-ka-lan-da-ka in Magadha. Filled with joy Nye-rgyal bowed down at the feet of venerable rTa-thul three times and moved towards the direction of dPang-nas-Kyes.

When dPang-nas-skyes saw Nye-rgyal approaching, he said to him that all his sense organs appeared to have been cleansed. That his complexion looked fair. He therefore asked Nye-rgyal whether he had found the essence. When he said, he had, he was asked to enunciate on that. Whereupon Nye-rgyal said:

“All the phenomena originated from the cause.
All their cause and method of prevention are being enunciated by the Tathagata himself.
Such greatness is he who preaches thus*.

At that very moment dPang-nas-skyes attained the realization that all the phenomena is essentially pure and free from the impurities. By virtue of having seen, heard, comprehend and arrived at the depth, he overcame the doubt and uncertainty. He triumphantly overcame fear, stood up from his seat, threw a shawl over the shoulder, and with folded hand towards venerable Nye-rgyal, he said:

“This is the doctrine of the saviour.
Throughout the several millions of kalpas’
Such is not seen or heard in former times.
The immortality and the freedom from suffering.
This is the state to which I do follow*.

He then asked Nye-rgyal as to where the Buddha resided. Nye-rgyal told him that he resides in the bamboo grove of Bya-ka-lan-da-ka in Magadha. Nye-rgyal told dPang-nas-skyes that they would go there and take the vow of chastity in the presence of Buddha. dPang-nas-skyes told Nye-rgyal that in this way they would be able to serve their masters and disciples and thus fulfill their purpose. When they told the fellow Brahman sons about this, they said, they would also follow in their footsteps. Nye-rgyal and dPang-nas-skyes along with two hundred and fifty disciples to each proceeded to the Bamboo grove of Bya-ka-lan-da-ka.

When they saw from a distance the venerable rTa-thul sitting near the wood of the sublime Tree (Shing-ljor-pa) after his daytime routine, Nye-rgyal asked dPang-ras-skyes whether to venerate the Buddha or the one from whom they received Dharma (Chos), dPang-nas-skyes told Nye-rgyal that they would venerate the one from whom they received Dharma. Therefore, Nye-rgyal and dPang-nas-skyes bowed down at the feet of the venerable rTa-thul and then went towards Buddha who was delivering a midday discourse to several hundred monk attendants. On seeing Nye-rgyal and dPang-nas-skyes from a distance, the Buddha asked the monk attendants as to whether they had seen Nye-rgyal and dpang-nas-skyes who embodied the essence of the whole collection of their virtues and who drew the entire group, coming to the assembly. When they said they did, the Buddha foretold that these two represented his pair of hearers (Sang-Sravakas/Tib: Nyan-drus) who would become not only his pair of principal disciples but also a virtuous pair, one of whom shall become accomplished in miraculous performance and the other in sublime wisdom.

Nye-rgyal and dpang-nas-skyes went towards the Buddha, bowed down at his feet, and earnestly asked him to ordain them into the excellence of Vinaya (Tib-kha) precepts and to grant them the requirements to undergo a chaste life of monkhood in his presence. The Buddha therefore ordained them into his fold (rgya-zlong Tshar-sog) by instructing them to undergo a life of chastity. Immediately after the injunction, they were transformed into monks devoid of affair on the head, covered with robe, alms bowl and religious vessel in hand, they manifested like a conduct of an ordained monk of hundred years old.

CHAPTER IV

THE ATTAINMENT OF NIRVANA BY ARYA SHARIPUTRA AND MAHA MAUDGALYAYANA

When the Buddha was residing at Bya-kha-lae-da-ka in Magadha, the all pervasive activities of the venerable Shariputra and Maudgalyayana were. At times they went to the sentient beings suffering in the realm of hell, at times to the realm of animals, realm of Pietaas (Yi-dags), realm of gods, and the realm of human beings.

At one such time when they went to the realm of great hell (dMyi-lha Cherp-po), the venerable Shariputra told Maudgalyayana to give respite to the suffering of the beings in the realm of hell. Accordingly, Maudgalyayana empowered with miraculous powers, rose up in the air and showered rainfall like an endless turning of the spoke of chokgot which extinguished the fire up to Avichi (Narmer) hell. When the venerable Shariputra told that now he would also give respite to the suffering of the beings in the realm of hell, the venerable Maudgalyayana encouraged him to do so. The venerable Shariputra, by virtue of his supreme wisdom generated the contemplative expansibility called Ma-s-pa-can which brought much coolness to the terrible heat of Avichi hell (the eight hell of burning heat) and thereby put an end to the suffering of the sentient beings.

Then they saw the heroic master rDozugs-byed who as a result of having professed an erroneous teaching in the human world was born in the realm of hell with an immense body and the tongue cultivated by five hundred ploughs.

The heroic master rDozugs-byed told the venerable Shariputra and Maudgalyayana to inform his disciples when they go to the human world that by his erroneous teaching he had misled a number of people because of which his tongue was being cultivated by five hundred ploughs there; that as much as they pay homage
