

Direct Introductions into the Three Embodiments, Supreme Key-Instructions of the Dwags po Bka' brgyud Tradition¹

Introduction

*Who is the teacher making for the excellent qualities and Uprooting all sentient beings' entire host of flaws?
... It is the all-good buddha nature or Vajradhara, the sixth buddha in union
Which is continuous throughout all, the ground, the path, and the fruition.
This teacher as such is perfect buddhahood,
Primordially uncontaminated by all obscurations.
As a synonym for this teacher,
the victor Zhwa dmar pa Mkha' spyod dbang po²
Used the term 'the primordial buddha's great utter clarity'.
... In the unsurpassable secret tantras it is called
'Causeless primordial buddha'.³*

² Second Zhwa dmar pa (1350–1405), an important master in the Karma Bka' brgyud tradition. Having been the student and main lineage holder of the Fourth Karma pa Rol pa'i rdo rje (1340–1383), he passed on the esoteric instructions of the Karma Bka' brgyud tradition to the Fifth Karma pa De bzhin gshegs pa (1384–1415). His Collected Works comprise seven volumes in which he covers a broad range of subjects of the philosophical and meditative training as transmitted in the Bka' brgyud pa tradition. Unfortunately, just half of these works are extant today. At least we know about the large amount of his writings by virtue of a list of them provided by the Fourth Zhwa dmar pa Chos grags ye shes (1453–1524). This list is contained in the latter's Collected Works (CY_{sb}) which were republished in 2009 in six volumes. The title of this list is The Precious Necklace of the Complete Words of the Glorious Mkha' Spyod Dbang Po (Tib. Dpal ldan mkha' spyod dbang po'i bka' bum yongs su rdzogs pa'i dkar chag rin po che'i phreng ba).

hese introductory verses in Karma pa Mi bskyod rdo rje's *Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments*⁴ indicate the essential teaching of the Dwags po Bka' brgyud tradition⁵ of Tibetan Buddhism. Embedded in the view of the inseparability of emptiness and compassion, mind as such is viewed (1) not as mere emptiness but as coemergent wisdom or unchanging buddha nature endowed with qualities, yet (2) not in the sense of an eternal metaphysical essence. By making these two points Mi bskyod rdo rje steers clear from views such as maintained respectively in the Dge lugs and Jo nang systems.

Mi bskyod rdo rje (1507–1554) was the eighth Karma pa hierarch and one of the most brilliant scholars of Tibetan Buddhism. To him, the supreme key-instructions of the Dwags po Bka' brgyud tradition are summoned in the so-called “introduction into the three or four kāyas or embodiments”, allowing for the integration of all of the Buddha's teachings. Thus, having in mind the importance of this template, Mi bskyod rdo rje composed his Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments. This text, abbreviated with the Tibetan title Sku gsum ngo sprod rnam bshad was the last elaborate treatise he authored toward the end of his life. He started writing this exposition in 1548 at the age of 42 when he was in Mtshur pu, the main monastic seat of the Karma pas in Central Tibet. He completed the text in the following year 1549 in Thob Rgyal dgra 'dul gling in Gtsang Zab phu lung,⁶ finalizing it just five years before he passed away in 1554. It covers two complete volumes (vol. 21 and 22) in the Collected Works of Karma pa Mi bskyod rdo rje as they were newly compiled in 2004.⁷ A recent publication from 2013 consists of a three-volume book edition.⁸

At the end of this extensive work, when dedicating the merit of having composed this treatise, Mi bskyod rdo rje explicitly states that mkha' spyod dbang pos | gdod ma'i sangs rgyas rab gsal chen po zhes ming 'dogs par mdzad pa'i phyir te | ... gsang ba bla na med pa'i rgyud las || dang po'i sangs rgyas rgyu med pa || zhes sogs 'byung ba |.

he considers it to be a comprehensive presentation of the intent of the Buddha Dharma encompassing the entire meaning of the sūtra- and tantra teachings as they were transmitted in the Dwags po Bka' brgyud tradition. He even remarks that future generations of practitioners should not have any regrets, thinking that they did not have the good fortune of having met him in person—studying this explanation, he says, equals with actually meeting him.⁹ Taking into account these statements by the author himself—and given that at the time he was one of the main lineage holders of the Karma Bka' brgyud school and in his function as the Karma pa hierarch responsible for transmitting its spiritual heritage to future generations—one can justifiably assume that it contains Mi bskyod rdo rje's preferred opinions regarding the view and practice as cultivated in the Dwags po Bka' brgyud tradition.

However, before going into some points of this treatise, it might be helpful to look at another much earlier text in the Karma Bka' brgyud lineage which appears to be the referent for Mi bskyod rdo rje's comprehensive work and deals with the introduction into the three embodiments.

Rang byung rdo rje's short Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments

This text is Rang byung rdo rje's short Sku gsum ngo sprod, The Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments, which consists of but 14 to 19 pages depending on the respective edition. One of these editions is contained in Kong sprul's Gdams ngag mdzod, The Treasury of Key-Instructions.¹⁰ In the colophon, Rang byung rdo rje is stated as its author and thus it is usually attributed to the Third Karma pa Rang byung rdo rje (1284–1339), which is also confirmed by current well-

In this illusory treatise [i.e., the Sku gsum ngo sprod rnam bshad] I arranged a complex meaning in a few words. known Khenpos of the Karma Bka' brgyud tradition.¹¹ The text was therefore also included in the Collected Works of the Third Karma pa newly compiled in 2006.¹²

One should, however, keep in mind that "Rang byung rdo rje" does not only name the Third Karma pa, but is also one of the common names of the Second Karma pa, Karma Pakshi (1204–1283). Moreover, as for its contents the text is certainly closely associated with the Second Karma pa. Now, either, as commonly assumed, the text was actually written by the Third Karma pa Rang byung rdo rje who then recorded therein the teachings given by the Second Karma pa or it was authored by the Second Karma pa and signed with his name Rang byung rdo rje.¹³ The reasons for these considerations are as follows:

[1] First of all, when Mi bskyod rdo rje's Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments, the Sku gsum ngo sprod rnam bshad, was re-published in 1978,¹⁴ the subtitle says that it is "a detailed exegesis of the Sku gsum ngo sprod instructions of Karma Pakshi". Moreover, in the introduction of this 1978 publication it is specified that the Sku gsum ngo sprod was "an instruction received in a vi-

¹³ See for example Kapstein 1985, "Religious Syncretism in 13th century Tibet, The Limitless Ocean Cycle". In this article, Kapstein proves that the Rgya mtsho mtha' yas kyi skor which was also written by a Karma pa Rang byung rdo rje was indeed authored by the Second Karma pa. Even so, it was taken up into the Collected Works of the Third Karmapa Rang byung rdo rje published in Tibet in 2006. In this article (p. 361), Kapstein quotes excerpts from the Autobiographical Writings of the Second Karma pa Karma Pakshi, where it is evident that Karma Pakshi is also called Rang byung rdo rje: "This is the unborn, primordially pure Lion's roar proclaimed by one who is in the future to be emanated by Simhanāda, in the past Dus gsum mkhyen pa himself, at present Rang byung rdo rje." And "I am Rang byung rdo rje, the vajra-king, one of great might ...". These are just two examples from the autobiography of Karma Pakshi where he frequently uses the name Rang byung rdo rje for himself. Moreover, (in ibid. p. 362), Kapstein quotes Dpa' bo gtsug lag phreng ba who describes O rgyan pa, the student of the Second and teacher of the Third Karma pa. When identifying the Third Karma pa, O rgyan pa is reported to have said: "As my guru's esoteric name (gsang mtshan) was Rang byung rdo rje, I will name you just that." Moreover, Kapstein writes (ibid., 362, n. 12): "Significant in this regard is the remark made to me by the Ven. Dpa' bo Rin po che in July 1981: 'Rang byung rdo rje is the name of all the Karma pas'."

sion by the Second Zhwa nag Karma Pakshi (1206–1282)".¹⁵ That Karma Pakshi was the one who—in whichever way—received the Sku gsum ngo sprod instructions is also confirmed due to a list of writings of the Second Zhwa dmar pa mkha' spyod dbang po (1350–1405) where it is remarked that Karma Pakshi received the Sku gsum ngo sprod instructions from Saraha, Nāropā, and Maitrīpa.¹⁶

[2] Secondly, the main teachings of the Sku gsum ngo sprod, i.e., the “wheel of reality of the four core-points” (gnad bzhi chos nyid kyi 'khor lo) and the “introduction into the three kāyas” (sku gsum ngo sprod), do not occur in the extant writings of the Third Karma pa as teachings given by himself but clearly as instructions of the Second Karma pa.¹⁷

[It is] the practice of fourfold principles, a sequence of meditation of key-instructions that liberate the mind-stream in four aspects. [2] There is the instruction of the introduction into the three kāyas that was given to the dharma master Karma Pakshi by Saraha, Nāropā, and Maitrīpa. It comprises the instruction manual of the introduction into the three kāyas which is connected with the introduction into the dharma that is to be practiced. ¹⁷ In the Collected Works of the Third Karma pa, the term “the wheel of reality of the four core-points” occurs, outside of the text Sku gsum ngo sprod, just twice. One occurrence is in the text Rlung sems gnad kyi lde mig, authored by Chos rje rin po che karma pa (RD_{ss} vol. 7, 264–268) who again is no other than Karma Pakshi. 268_{1–2}: “All happiness and suffering of the world of appearances, samsāra and nirvāna, is [a matter of] the dependent arising of prāṇa/mind. In that regard and so forth one should know [how] to practice the inconceivable dependent arising of prāṇa/mind. Supreme gtum mo is to be free from all mental engagements and to be connected with prāṇa/mind-Mahāmudrā. Therefore, meditate continuously the wheel of reality of the four core-points. In short, one expels all negative prāṇa/mind outwardly and summons inwardly all good ones. [3] Thirdly, in the part of homage in the beginning of this short Sku gsum ngo sprod, there is first a general homage to the Bka' brgyud masters, followed by a particular praise directed to the First Karma pa Dus gsum mkhyen pa (1110–1193), and his disciple 'Gro mgon ras chen (1148–1218), i.e., the direct teacher of Karma Pakshi.¹⁸ If the author were indeed the Third Karma pa, wouldn't one expect that these special praises would also be directed to Karma Pakshi and his disciple Grub thob O rgyan pa rin chen dpal (1230–1309) who was one of the main teachers of the Third Karma pa?¹⁹

in the text Bka' bzhi brgyud pa'i gsol 'debs, RD_{se} vol. 5, 1-358, where the Third Karma pa speaks about the bodhisattva Rang byung rdo rje's, i.e., Karma Pakshi's advice to his students, p. 119.₁₈: "The bodhisattva Rang byung rdo rje gave [the following] advice to the great meditators who are endowed with the two types of knowledge [and were] his students: When one meditates continuously on the wheel of reality of the four core-points which are [transmitted] uninterruptedly in the tradition of the four transmissions [from] Vajradhara, Ti lo and Na ro, the power of prāṇa/mind is perfected and Mahāmudrā is realized. It does not even require a moment and one will become the glory of guides of all sentient beings. I [the III Karma pa] too, have meditated continuously on the wheel of reality of the four core-points and have thereby perfected my prāṇa / mind. Through this I became able to act for the benefit of sentient beings without weariness." sems dpa' rang byung rdo rje | gdul byar gyur pa'i mkhyen pa gnyis dang ldan pa'i bsgom chen rnams la gdams pa | rdo rje 'chang te lo na ro bka' bzhi'i rgyud pa bar ma chad pa'i gnad bzhi chos kyi 'khor lo rgyun ma chad par bsgoms na rlung sems kyi rtsal rdzogs shing phyag rgya chen po rtogs pa la skad cig tsam yang mi 'gor zhing sems can thams cad kyi 'dren pa'i dpal du 'gyur ro | kho bo yang gnad gzhi'i chos kyi 'khor lo rgyun par bsgoms pas rlung sems la rtsal rdzogs shing skyo dub med pas sems can gyi don nus pa byung ba yin |. The last words "became able to act for the benefit of sentient beings" appears to be a quote of a line in the short Direct Introduction into the Three Kāyas: sems can gyi don nus pa byung ba. See Gdams ngag mdzod vol. 9, 243..

[4] Fourthly, the Eighth Karma pa Mi bskyod rdo rje, in the very end of his extensive Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments, ascertains the unity of appearance and emptiness, substantiating this with a quote from the Heart Sūtra and saying that this is what all buddhas and bodhisattvas such as the masters 'Jig rten gsum mgon, the First Karma pa Du gsum mkhyen pa, 'Gro mgon ras chen, Karma Pakshi etc. teach.²⁰ He does not specifically refer to the Third Karma pa either, but names explicitly masters up to and including the Second Karma pa, Karma Pakshi, and names the third Karma pa just as one of those eminent masters who continued to uphold this transmission. And finally, in his concluding verses, when praising the Tibetan forefathers of the Bka' brgyud lineage, Mi bskyod rdo rje directs his prayers to the First Karma pa Dus gsum mkhyen pa, 'Gro mgon ras pa, Rgyal ba bsod nams rdo rje, and the siddha Karma Pakshi. He does at that point again not mention the

²⁰ Sku gsum ngo sprod rnam bshad, KN_w vol. 3, 375.-376: "Through the equality of existence and nonexistence that is free from all real existence and nonexistence, the mind which is the inseparability of emptiness and compassion free from obscurations and its appearances which do not have a different substance from that, these two—even though they are in no way established as the phenomena of samsāra and nirvāna, as entities and nonentities which [respectively] have obscurations and no [obscurations]—are to be understood as the sameness of the unity of male and female (yab yum), as the two aspects of the appearance of existence and the emptiness of nonexistence respectively with form and without form. Third Karma pa explicitly.²¹ Thus it appears, that to the Eighth Karma pa Mi bskyod rdo rje, the Second Karma pa Karma Pakshi was the source for the short Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments.

As for the teachings contained in this short Sku gsum ngo sprod, Kong sprul (1813–1899) says in his description of the “Eight Great Conveyances of Practice Traditions” (sgrub brgyud shing rta chen po brgyad):

The glorious Karma pa matured and liberated beings by means of the “wheel of reality of the four points” and the “introduction into the three kāyas”.²²

He does not specify which Karma pa he means, but when we look in the Collected Works of the Third Karma pa, his biography of Karma Pakshi has the title Bla ma rin po che'i rnam thar | karma pa'i rnam thar, which might indicate that he used the name Karma pa in particular to refer to the Second Karma pa, Karma Pakshi.

In his Treasury of Knowledge, Kong sprul also explains in the context of describing the path of liberation of Mahāmudrā that “the Karma pa emphasized the introduction into the three embodiments”²³ and he relates this to a vajra-song by Mar pa Chos kyi blo gros (1012–1097) where the latter gives a very concise introduction into the three embodiments through three analogies. Kong sprul says:

The glorious Karma pa Rang byung rol pa'i rdo rje, the future sixth Buddha Lion's Roar in person, the one who abides in a bodhisattva's conduct, has impartially turned the wheel of reality of the four core-points [and] of the enlightened body, speech, and mind and has taught uninterruptedly in the three times the magical display of practice pervading all pure realms. The root of all the gateways to dharma practice [taught thereby] is:

[1] For people of lesser aptitude the four preliminary practices by virtue of which the mind-stream is trained.

[2] For people with moderate capacity it is four[fold], (a) the core-point of the body, (b) the core-point of winds, i.e., prāṇāyāma, (c) the core-point of the mind through focusing, and (d) the core-point of physical training, i.e., yogic postures. The root for all four is taught to be the yoga of gtum mo, i.e., bliss and warmth.

[3] People with best acumen are fully guided on the instantaneous path through Mahāmudrā, the introduction into the three embodiments.

Moreover, [Mar pa,] with the analogy—"in the ground floor of Pullahari, the continuous rain of the nirmāṇakāya falls"—gave the introduction into the nirmāṇakāya connected with conventional bodhicitta. With the analogy—"in the middle story of Pullahari, the sambhogakāya is indicated by a symbol"—he gave the introduction into the sambhogakāya connected with prāṇāyāma. [And he] gave the introduction into Mahāmudrā, the dharmakāya, infinite realization, the practice of self-arisen wisdom, connected with the core-point of abiding in the innate, that which cannot be indicated with symbols and is beyond words. It is said that if this series is practiced even for just seven days prior to one's death, it is without doubt that the level of Vajradhara will be achieved.²⁴

Let us have a short look at the structure and content of Rang byung rdo rje's short text The Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments which deals with exactly these points that, as pointed out above, Mar pa is said to have taught to his students. It consists of three parts, [1] the preliminaries, [2] the "wheel of reality of the four core-points", and [3] the "introduction into the three embodiments".²⁵

The above-mentioned Khenpo Chodrag Tenphel also mentioned during his lecture on the history of the Karma Bka' brgyud tradition during the "Second International Karma Kagyu Meeting" in Bodhgaya on Dec. 12th 2016 that the Sku gsum ngo sprod is a short commentary on this vajra-song by Mar pa and that Mi bskyod rdo rje's Sku gsum ngo sprod rnam bshad is a long commentary on it.*

²⁵ Sku gsum ngo sprod, in: Gdams ngag mdzod vol. 9, 232-233: "Here, the [enlightened] body, speech, and mind of all Bka' brgyud teachers, the instruction "intro-

[Ad 1] The preliminaries for adepts with lesser capacities comprising four practices, all closely connected with guru yoga, are:

- (1) Turning toward the attainment of awakening and developing bodhicitta.
- (2) Meditating on Vajrasattva for purification.
- (3) Practicing the mandala-offerings for generating merit.
- (4) Practicing guru yoga for quickly receiving spiritual support.

[Ad 2] The “wheel of reality of the four core-points” for people of moderate capacity consists of:

- (1) The core-point of the body, i.e., establishing oneself in the vajra-position, leaving the speech natural without talking, and abiding naturally in mind’s nature, the sphere of phenomena (dharmadhātu), neither rejecting nor involving oneself in the appearances of the six senses.
- (2) The core-point of devotion in the context of guru yoga. One imagines Vajradhara encircled by all Bka’ brgyud bla mas, embodying all buddhas of the three times and requests the highest siddhis of mahāmudrā. Then the adept imagines that all Bka’ brgyud bla mas dissolve into Vajradhara who dissolves into the meditator. It is emphasized that one should not meditate on the bla ma as a human person, but as Vajradhara.
- (3) The core-point of the winds associated with prāṇayāma. These methods are also combined with guru yoga practice.
- (4) The “root” practice of the “four wheels”, i.e., the instruction on gtum mo based in Vajrayogini practice.

[Ad 3] The direct “introduction into the three kāyas”, nirmāṇakāya, the sambhogakāya, and the dharmakāya.

- (1) First the text gives a meditation instruction associated with Buddha Śākyamuni meant to introduce the adept into the Thereby this instruction, the “introduction into the three kāyas” is the root of all dharma, the actual point of all key-instructions, the genuine teaching for individuals of highest capacity who [progress] instantaneously.” ‘dir bka’ brgyud bla ma thams cad kyi sku gsung thugs gnad bzhi chos nyid kyi ’khor lo la sogs pa thams cad yongs su rdzogs pa’i sku gsum ngo sprod kyi gdams ngag ’di la | gang zag blo dman pa rnams la singon du ’gro ba’i chos bzhi dang | gang zag dbang po ’bring po la gnad bzhi chos nyid kyi ’khor lo dang | gang zag dbang po rab tu gyur pa rnams la sku gsum ngo sprod phyag rgya chen po cig char ba’i man ngag dang gsum mo | de yang sku gsum ngo sprod kyi gdams ngag ’di ni | chos thams cad kyi rtsa ba | man ngag thams cad kyi dngos gzhi | dbang po yang rab cig char ba’i dam chos yin |.

nirmāṇakāya. The text relates this to Mar pa's "in the ground floor of Pullahari, the continuous rain of the nirmāṇakāya falls".²⁶

- (2) The following instruction concerns a meditation associated with Avalokiteśvara, meant to introduce the adept into the sambhogakāya. The text relates this to "in the middle story of Pullahari, the sambhogakāya is indicated by a symbol".²⁷
- (3) The last instruction regarding the dharmakāya is said to be for those of highest capacities; it is "the actual introduction of the core points of integrating the practice, the essence of all".²⁸ Here Mar pa's song is not explicitly referred to, meaning wise, however, they are similar.²⁹

This overview of the short Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments shows that the instructions are entirely practice oriented. They are presented in a gradual series, recommending preliminary practices and in particular the meditation of guru yoga on Vajradhara as the basis for the more advanced stages. The practice of the Buddhist tantras, in particular of gtum mo in connection with Vajrayoginī practice is recommended for practitioners of moderate capacity while the direct introduction into mind's nature as the dharmakāya is meant for those of highest acumen thus reflecting the type of Mahāmudrā instructions as taught by Sgam po pa, one of the founding fathers of this transmission. Kong sprul later referred to this as "essence-Mahāmudrā".³⁰

Theg mchog rdo rje's concise Instructions on the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments

It should also be mentioned that there is yet another extant Karma Bka' brgyud work on this topic with the title Instructions on the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments, the Profound Teaching of the Glorious Karma pa, the Perfect Buddha. (Tib. Rdzogs pa'i sangs rgyas dpal karma pa'i zab chos sku gsum ngo sprod kyi gdams pa). It was authored by the Fourteenth Karma pa Theg mchog rdo rje (1798–1868). Just as the short Sku gsum ngo sprod, it is also contained in vol. 9 of Kong sprul's *Gdams ngag mdzod*³¹ and comprises but six folios. Very succinctly, the author explains the “wheel of reality of the four core-points” and the “introduction into the three embodiments” which are the central teachings of Rang byung rdo rje's short Sku gsum ngo sprod. He concludes by saying that all phenomena are but mind and that everything is the inseparability of appearance and emptiness. He says that detailed instructions on this should be obtained from the various medium, lengthy and extensive writings on this topic composed by previous Bka' brgyud masters and that he wrote this text according to a manuscript of Karma chags med rin po che (17th c.) which the latter in turn wrote based on the root text of the master Rang byung rdo rje.³² With this remark it is clear, that for the Fourteenth Karma pa, the direct reference for this teaching on the three kāyas is Rang byung rdo rje's short Sku gsum ngo sprod rather than Mar pa's vajra-song. Moreover, it points to the existence of more commentaries on this topic within the Bka' brgyud school, which today no longer seem to be extant. At this point it should also be mentioned that the extensive Sku gsum ngo sprod rnam bshad by the Eighth Karma pa also does not contain any direct reference to Mar pa's vajra-song. Let us now turn to this comprehensive treatise by Mi bskyod rdo rje.

Mi bskyod rdo rje's extensive Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments

In his Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments, Mi bskyod rdo rje takes up these instructions and puts them into the context of the theory and practice of the entire Buddhist path. First, he presents the transmission lineage for these teachings, emphasizing that they were transmitted in the Western part of India by the Pañdita Vajrakumāra, who was no one else but Padmasambhāva, to Tipupa and Re chung pa—all of whom were, according to Mi bskyod rdo rje, but manifestations of Karma Pakshi—and eventually to Karma Pakshi himself. From Karma Pakshi the transmission went to Grub thob mnyan ras pa and O rgyan pa and from them to the Third Karma pa Rang byung rdo rje. It continued through the Karma Bka' brgyud tradition up to Sangs rgyas mnyan pa his root-guru from whom Karma pa Mi bskyod rdo rje received these teachings.³³

After this, Mi bskyod rdo rje proceeds to briefly discuss the so-called lower vehicle on just a few pages, followed by a more detailed presentation of the causal Pāramitāyāna and a very elaborate explanation of the resultant Tantrayāna. Thus, the emphasis clearly lies on the latter. In the three volume edition of 2013, about six pages deal with the so-called lower vehicle, 180 pages are dedicated to the explanation of the Pāramitāyāna, and about 1.250 pages describe the Tantrayāna.

In the sūtric section, he presents the Pāramitāyāna from the perspective of conventional and ultimate bodhicitta. While the first is discussed succinctly, ultimate bodhicitta is explained in more detail by ascertaining bondage and liberation from the perspective of the two truths presented mainly according to the teaching systems of Atīśa (982-1054) and Śavaripa. Mi bskyod rdo rje fully endorses their views and emphasizes the importance of understanding the unity of the two truths. In this regards, he explains for example:

Even though samsāra and nirvāṇa, thoughts and the dharma-kāya, kernel and the husk, are [respectively] two, they are sameness. As is said: “samsāra and nirvāṇa do not exist as two [entities]. Thus, when one perfectly knows samsāra, it is said that one knows nirvāṇa.³⁴ ... From the perspective that they [i.e., the two truths / samsāra and nirvāṇa] are not established, earlier masters spoke in different ways about “the sameness of the two truths”, “the inseparability of samsāra and nirvāṇa”, “the unity of phenomena and the nature of phenomena”, “thoughts are dharmaṅkāya”, “the vivid conventional integrated as the true nature of phenomena” etc. Those [merely] famed as good Tibetan meditators did not understand this key-point. The two truths do not exist as two distinct truths in their own right. When one is not aware of one's own [nature] this is the time of delusion, i.e., the conventional [truth]. When one is aware of one's own [nature] this is the time of non-delusion, i.e., the ultimate [truth]. Because there is but this difference, these two are of one essence which is the unity of the two truths. The expression saying that the two truths are like the front and back of a hand [comes from] a mind affected by a huge mistaken perception and is therefore more remote from [Buddhism] than [views maintained] by non-Buddhists.³⁵

On the question “Is the absolute mind of full awakening which realizes all phenomena to be pure, that domain of the personally realized awareness of Noble Ones, not established as ultimate truth?”,³⁶ Mi bskyod rdo rje answers:

[No], because such awakening is just a convention of mere words and mere signs. [And], because when it does not even exist as conventional truth, how should it be established as ultimate truth?³⁷

Concerning the realization of the three embodiments, Mi bskyod rdo rje points out that generally, generating conventional bodhicitta contributes to the realization of the nirmāṇakāya and the sambhogakāya, while accomplishing ultimate bodhicitta allows for the realization of the dharmaṅkāya. In a later section of the text, however—stressing the inseparability of the accumulations and the buddha embodiments—he specifies, how this should be understood:

The embodiment of reality (dharma^{kāya}) is primarily attained through the accumulated virtue of the store of wisdom regarding ultimate truth, objects of knowledge as they really are. On the other hand, the form embodiments (rūpa^{kāya}) are attained mainly through the accumulation of the store of merit regarding conventional truth, objects of knowledge in all their complexity. Nevertheless, it is not the case that the dharma^{kāya} is attained only through the store of wisdom and the form kāyas only through the store of merit. Rather, by gathering the inseparability of the two accumulations [of merit and wisdom], the inseparability of the two kāyas is attained.³⁸

Along with these various view-oriented presentations, Mi bskyod rdo rje elucidates the spiritual practice that enables an adept to eventually actualize the buddha embodiments by realizing the two truths. This process requires the practice of calm abiding and deep insight. He explains both of these, śamatha and vipaśyanā, first in a general way and then in terms of their specific applications in the Bka' brgyud tradition. Mi bskyod rdo rje states that he presents this topic in the words of his teacher.³⁹ As this section appears to be a very important part in the sūtric instructions of this text, the following excerpts are quoted to provide some glimpses of the points Mi bskyod rdo rje makes regarding these common and uncommon ways of practicing śamatha and vipaśyanā:

My [spiritual] father, the great Ras pa,⁴⁰ says: “with respect to the natural condition or the ground or the cause or the knowables, there is (1) the ground for perfect insight upon which superimpositions and deprecations are eliminated and (2) the ground of natural spontaneity, the innate nature (gshis) of which does not abide in anything.

[Ad 1, the common practice:] The first [ground] are the outer and inner phenomena which are subsumed under the endless skandhas, *dhatu*s, and *āyatana*s (dharmin) as well as the [boundless] nature of phenomena (*dharma*tā). Following the profound scriptures, one thinks with reasonings about whether these endless [things] which appear as phenomena are real or false. When [doing so, it becomes obvious that]—without there being any reality or falsity—the nature of reality and falsity is not established as anything whatsoever: Due to the confusion of the tendencies of the manner of primordial mental clinging, there are now various appearances of reality and falsity. Whatever is there is equally false and therefore not appropriate to be true. By virtue of [properly understanding what is there,] one clears away the extreme of annihilation. [One understands that] within this mere falsity, all phenomena arise dependently. Thus one clears away the extreme of permanence. Being just false, these phenomena are not concretely established. Therefore, they are empty and this emptiness is referred to as ultimate truth. When the ultimate truth is realized by noble beings, the pollution of the two obscurations of the characters of elaborations is progressively purified and enlightenment occurs. Thereby, deep insight is the discernment of this mode of abiding, and calm abiding is to one-pointedly abide in the actuality of the unity of the two truths. Thus by way of śamatha and vipaśyanā one does not abide in the two huge extremes of samsāra and nirvāṇa. This description concerns the common way of the supreme vehicle. However, it is not the manner in which those of highest acumen practice meditation. Those of highest acumen rely on the second ground instead of the first ground.

[Ad 2, the uncommon practice:] The second ground as well does not deal with something other than the former, i.e., phenomena such as the skandhas etc. However, while the former is a ground of conceptualization whether [phenomena] are established in any way as reality and falsity, in the [second approach] one does not conceptualize in this way at all. Therefore, the ground upon which superimposition and depreciation are engaged in, collapses on its own accord. Thus they rely on the same ground, i.e., that earlier ground which [in this second approach, however,] turns into self-liberation, genuineness, the natural condition. At that point one does not ascertain all the knowable phenomena by way of examination and analysis. Instead, [one generates] extraordinary devotion to a genuine teacher endowed with realization and thereby accrues merit through the accumulation of this merit. The effect of this is great power. Through this one settles [in meditation] without in any way artificially spreading and summoning [one's attention] in terms of externally oriented awareness of objects, that involves mind and mental events in one's mind along with objects, and internally oriented self-awareness. Thereby, as if the commotion of everything in one's mind along with objects is entirely exhausted, elaborations cease on their own.

Query: What is this ceasing of elaborations like? Reply: All elaborations are included in two, in the elaborations of samsāra and of nirvāṇa; there are no other ones. ... Due to unawareness of one's mind as to its own true mode of abiding—because of this unawareness—the images of samsāra appear. In contrast to that, due to the luminous wisdom of one's own mind as to its true mode of abiding of itself—when [there is this] awareness—it appears as nirvāṇa. In this way, whatever appears as samsāra or as nirvāṇa is just the mode of conduct of unawareness and awareness in one's own mind. The dharmaḍhātu's purity of one's own mind does not change in terms of being lower [in case of] samsāra and higher [in case of] nirvāṇa, because there isn't any diminishing and increasing such as loosing and thriving etc. ... One abides in the fresh nature of the luminous mind, abiding vividly, wide awake and relaxed without wavering away from there. This is called śamatha. When one abides in this state, to simultaneously understand and precisely see the essence of one's own mind along with its object as utterly beyond abiding and arising as mental objects that are experienced, this is called vipaśyanā. ... These two as a union, as luminosity, this is called the yoga of the unity of śamatha and vipaśyanā. It is said that when the experiences of the debilitating malaise⁴¹ of mental engagement, which is an as-

The background that allows for such definitive certainty in the view that buddhahood is not to be searched for anywhere else but in one's own mind, is discussed by Mi bskyod rdo rje in another section of his text. Taking the Ratnagotravibhāga [RGV I.27-28] as his basis of discussion, Mi bskyod rdo rje gives an in-depth commentary on the three reasons provided therein why sentient beings are said to have buddha nature. He highlights that it is certainly right to view buddha nature as an ultimate phenomenon. However, as it also has the character of wisdom in regard to conventional transactions (tha snyad kun rdzob) it partakes of conventional truth as well and thus, buddha nature is precisely the inseparability of the two truths. It is in this sense that according to him, buddha nature has traditionally been identified with the substratum (ālaya), which, as Mi bskyod rdo rje clarifies again and again, comprises both the impure substratum of samsāric phenomena and the pure substratum of nirvānic phenomena. When obscured by adventitious defilements, buddha nature is the condition of possibility of samsāra and when free from these, it is the condition of possibility of nirvāna or, as formulated above, "whatever appears as samsāra or as nirvāna, is just the mode of conduct of unawareness and awareness in one's own mind".

In epistemological terms, the Karma pa argues that buddha nature is considered conventional from the perspective of not yet being free from efforts involving conceptual signs (mtshan rtsol) bound up with act, object and agent, but is considered ultimate from the perspective of the unfindability of such objectifying deliberations:

Such a quintessence [buddha nature] is designated as conventional from the perspective of there still being efforts involving conceptual signs (mtshan rtsol) based on the triad of object, agent and act. But, it is designated as ultimate from the perspective of not being established in terms of efforts involving conceptual signs. Although those who desire liberation on the basis of the two truths [as understood] in this way engage in acceptance and rejection, there is no reason to do anything at all in terms of accepting or rejecting the two truths as inherently existent [phenomena]. Consequently, it is said that the entire range of view, meditation, conduct, and fruition, are spontaneously present, being devoid of acceptance and rejection, uncontrived, and effortless.

[Thus,] all mental engagements are perfectly ascertained as being [already] abandoned.⁴⁵

This latter standpoint supports Mi bskyod rdo rje's contention that buddha nature is in no sense an established basis (gzhi grub), even if it serves as the basis of all human experience from bondage to liberation. Moreover, he explains:

This [buddha nature] is steadily continuous (rgyun brtan pa). Since it neither waxes nor wanes from sentient being up to buddha, it was posited as the ground of all phenomena comprising bondage and freedom, samsāra and nirvāṇa, the innate and adventitious, and the two truths. It was said to be non-momentary by virtue of its not being newly produced by causes from beginningless time to the future, but this does not mean that conventionally there is no momentariness [in the sense of phenomena being] produced by causes and conditions.

The ground of all phenomena prevails all-pervasively and impartially in buddhas and sentient beings. Yet, there is no need to [make it] an established basis because if there were something established in this way, the fallacy would absurdly follow that this factor and all persons individually endowed with it are selves and truly established.⁴⁶

After the explanations in the sūtric context, Mi bskyod rdo rje proceeds with his very extensive explanations on the Tantrayāna which makes the fruition the path. He does so from two perspectives. First he ascertains the three continua, i.e., the causal continuum, the path continuum and the resultant continuum:

KN_{vv} and KN_{RM} both have min which, however, seems to be a mistake.*

The causal continuum is the continuum of the nature. The path continuum is the continuum of the ground or the means. The fruition continuum is inalienableness. Therefore, it is the continuum of nonregression, of no-more-learning. The first continuum is the substantial cause. The second is the co-operating cause. When these two causes unequivocally combine, the third continuum infallibly occurs as the result of this combination.⁴⁷

Then he goes into the tantric practice in the context of these three continua. The causal continuum—in other words, buddha nature—is distinguished into the causal continuum of the mind and of the body. Here, the focus of his explanations lies on the first. He explains the causal continuum of the mind, i.e., buddha nature, mainly according to the teaching system of the Kālacakra tantra called the “king of tantras”. He also discusses some other tantras, yet emphasizes that the Kālacakra tantra conveys the final intent of all other tantras and shows how based on this tantra the entire manifestations of samsāra and nirvāṇa can be understood.

Mi bskyod rdo rje emphasizes that while the sūtric accounts do not fully reveal the defining conditions (mtshan nyid) or specify the illustrative instances (mtshan gzhi) of buddha nature as it operates in the life of an individual, the tantric accounts of the causal continuum treat buddha nature directly. They do so not as a hidden potential that is only vaguely alluded to by using metaphoric language but as an actual phenomenon to be concretely realized by way of tantric methods of “taking the goal as the path”. In the context of the causal continuum he goes in great detail into the causal continuum of the body, i.e., the channels, currents, and potencies. First he provides a general outline of these three and how the currents and potencies move within the structure of the channels. Then he describes the difference between karmic currents and wisdom-currents as well as between karmic potencies and wisdom potencies.

On the basis of Tibetan Kālacakra hermeneutics, Mi bskyod rdo rje also challenges different views regarding the three continua held by influential Tibetan scholars of the classical period, such as Tsong kha pa (1357–1419), Rgyal tshab dar ma (1364–1432), Red mda' ba (1349–1412), and 'Gos Lo tsā ba Gzhon nu dpal (1392–1481). His concern is to show that any one-sided speculative account of the causal continuum or buddha nature—equating it with sheer emptiness, attributing some kind of self-identity to it, or discussing it in the framework of a clear-cut dichotomy between samsāra and nirvāṇa—misses the point completely. For Mi bskyod rdo rje, it is essential to point out that buddha nature is beyond the discursive elaborations of existence and non-existence, being and non-being which are grounded in eternalistic and nihilistic viewpoints. To him, buddha nature is ever-present as great primordial perfect buddhahood which merely needs to be liberated from adventitious defilements to be recognized as it is. The discussion of the causal continuum makes up approx. fifteen percent of the explanation on the tantras.

The path continuum is introduced by pointing to the tantric path as being superior to the sūtric one. Based on that, Mi bskyod rdo rje guides the reader through different levels of tantra. He shortly mentions the kriyatantra and yogatantra and goes into great detail in the yoganiruttaratantra (rnal 'byor bla na med pa'i rgyud). He presents this with explanations regarding the gate of accessing tantric practice, i.e., the empowerment, along with discussing the associated samayas and commitments. He also goes into the qualifications of and requirements from both, teacher and disciple, and continues with elucidating the Creation and Completion Stages and the various ways of conduct. Mi bskyod rdo rje explains this topic in terms of the systems of the three yoganiruttaratantras, the mahāyogatantra Guhyasamāja, the yoginītantra Hevajra, and finally Kālacakra. In Tibetan these were called respectively “father-tantra” (pha rgyud)⁴⁸, “mother-tantra” (ma rgyud)⁴⁹, and “advaya-tantra” (gnyis med rgyud).⁵⁰ In the course of these explanations, he provides a detailed introduction into the realization of the three or rather four embodiments, i.e., the nirmāṇakāya, the sambhogakāya, the dharmakāya, and the svabhāvikakāya which he refers to respectively as “Mahāmudrā, the practice of coemergence” (phyag chen lhan cig skyes sbyor) in terms of the body, the speech, the mind, and wisdom (ye shes). In this section the correlation with Rang byung rdo rje's short Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments is very obvious. Mi bskyod rdo rje, when presenting the empowerment which matures and the path that liberates uses the latter template to first present the four preliminaries of (1) refuge and bodhicitta, (2) purification through the practice of Vajrasattva, (3) generating merit through the practice of māndala offerings and (4) guru yoga. He then proceeds with very detailed instructions regarding the direct introduction into the four embodiments, the nirmāṇakāya, the sambhogakāya, the dharmakāya, and the svabhāvikakāya.

⁴⁹ Ibid: “The Tibetan ma'i rgyud or ma rgyud is an abbreviated or elliptical expression for rnal 'byor ma'i rgyud and is actually a rendering of yoginītantra.”

As for the nirmāṇakāya or the embodiment of manifestation, the Creation and Completion Stages as well as the enlightened activities of the respective deity are presented, respectively the enlightened activity of the ornamental wheel of the inexhaustible body, speech, and mind. This is followed by a detailed introduction into the sambhogakāya or the embodiment of enjoyment. In this context, the various yogic practices included in the "four wheels" are presented, in particular the practice of gtum mo. This is then followed by two shorter sections regarding the introduction into the dharmakāya or the embodiment of reality, and the svabhāvikakāya or the embodiment of the nature as such. The presentation of the path continuum covers the bulk portion of the explanation on the tantras, approx. eighty percent of it.

Mi bskyod rdo rje's concern is to highlight that once the tantric Creation Stages (utpattikrama : bskyed rim) and Completion Stages (niśpānnakrama : rdzogs rim) have cleared away adventitious defilements, buddhahood replete with all qualities of a buddha's body, speech and mind—the perfect deity, which is ever-present also during the phase of the causal continuum—is fully revealed, thus again pointing out that these qualities are in no way newly produced. This process of "making the goal the path" is tantamount to "the emergence of Mahāmudrā realization". In regard to this principle view of the Dwags po traditions he explains:

The deity of the causal continuum and buddhahood itself are present in the primordially present great Completion Stage. In this regard, when a fortunate disciple of highest capacity and a qualified teacher come together in auspicious circumstances, then by the teacher simply making a connection (mtshams sbyar ba) using mere symbolic indications or words, the wisdom of self-arisen Mahāmudrā or the face of the primordially present buddha is encountered directly. Among the Bka' brgyud pas this is known as "the emergence of Mahāmudrā realization". Therefore, the buddha of the causal continuum or the perfect deity itself are present as primordial buddha[hood] even during the obscured phase of impure sentient beings.⁵¹...

Though the buddha or the deity of the primordial Completion Stage are present without defilements even in the causal continuum, [when] connected with adventitious defilements, it is labelled as sentient being, when [partly] cleansed from defilements, it is labelled as bodhisattva, and when purified from defilements it is labelled as buddha.⁵² But [such] labels are mere postulates for relational factors (ltos chos). By contrast, when [buddha nature] was imputed as “ever-present” (ye bzhugs), [this means] the buddha and the deity of the thoroughly pure Completion Stage, which are free from conceptualization and non-conceptualization, are not newly arisen and are not newly attained.⁵³

The last approx. five percent of the text is dedicated to explaining the resultant continuum. Here, Mi bskyod rdo rje presents buddhahood first by going into the explanations common to the sūtras and the tantras and then specifies the tantric perspective on the fruition. Mi bskyod rdo rje also considers the tantric fruition continuum ('bras rgyud) in light of rival Tibetan views of ultimate reality. Specifically, he contrasts the two diametrically opposed views of the ultimate that had come to prominence during the classical period: the Jo nang conception of the ultimate as a permanent metaphysical essence (immutable buddhahood) that is beyond dependent arising and the Dge lugs pa conception of the ultimate as sheer emptiness in the sense of a nonaffirming negation.

In this context, he criticizes views which either collapse conventional reality into the ultimate or impose a separation between them, and instead opts for a view of the inseparability of the two truths which holds them to be neither the same (monism) nor fundamentally different (dualism). Mi bskyod rdo rje's careful consideration of such rival perspectives allows him to highlight the problems of opposing eternalistic and nihilistic, monistic and dualistic, interpretations of the ultimate, while emphasizing the virtues of viewing the two truths as conventionally discernable but ultimately indistinguishable cognitive domains. Rejecting both the typical Jo nang view of an immutable buddhahood qua buddha nature as a metaphysical permanent phenomenon and the mere negation theory often found in the works of Dge lugs authors, Mi bskyod rdo rje concludes that the ultimate truth, the fruition continuum in the tantric system, consists in the inseparability of the two truths and two embodiments (dharmakāya : chos sku; rūpakāya : gzugs sku), of emptiness and appearance. In this context, the following excerpt points to his main position regarding the buddha embodiments:

Most of those who purport to be scholars and siddhas in India and Tibet as well as many exceedingly foolish people propound [the following:] Among the two [aspects of] a buddha's embodiments (kāya) and wisdoms—[1] the self-beneficial ultimate embodiment and wisdom and [2] the other-beneficial conventional embodiments and wisdoms—the former is emptiness, the dharmakāya, the naturally pure dharmadhātu which is empty of all limitations of discursive elaborations, whereas the latter is the form kāyas which manifest as the variety of the conventional endowed with discursive elaborations. This is proclaimed on the basis of the statement [from RGV III.1]:

Self-benefit and other-benefit are the ultimate embodiment
 And the state of conventional embodiments depending on it.
 Because of its state of emancipation and maturation
 The fruit is divided into sixty-four qualities.⁵⁴

But this [above mentioned interpretation] is not at all acceptable, because, to posit self-benefit as the ultimate and other-benefit as the conventional and to thereby explain the two embodiments, the two truths and two benefits as separate from each other (ya bral ba) turns out to be a wrong explanation. The reason is that it [implicitly] asserts that the self-beneficial, ultimate truth, the dharmakāya, would not function for the benefit of others but [only be] one's own benefit and that such an ultimate truth would be different from the conventional. Also, such a dharmakāya [would thus] be postulated to be truly established in its own right as a substance different from the form embodiments. [Conversely,] the other-beneficial, conventional truth and the form embodiments would not function for one's own benefit and the like, being the opposite of the above. If one wonders what's wrong with this claim, [the answer is] what could be a greater blunder than that?

The reason [for this allegation is that] when it comes to the two truths, whereby all phenomena are described in terms of two truths, if they are not [even] conventionally established as being the same or different, let alone ultimately, then what could be more mistaken than to proclaim that we must posit the two truths as different on the level of buddhahood? That is not all. [In terms of] your pet idea of emptiness—namely, something like a nonaffirming negation which negates [all] conceptually-constructed extremes—it is not possible that such an emptiness could function for one's own benefit and exist as the dharmakāya because functioning for one's own benefit requires the existence of a beneficiary and a benefactor, and existing as dharmakāya requires that it exists as an ensemble which is of the nature of embodiment (lus kyi bdag nyid can). But such is not possible for your nonaffirming emptiness which is the mere purity [i.e., the sheer absence] aspect of natural purity.

Further, some unwise people maintain that the aspect of emptiness consisting in the natural purity of all phenomena at the time of the ground when it is free from all obscurations at the time of fruition, is posited as the svabhāvikakāya. Likewise, natural emptiness, which is the true nature of phenomena (dharmatā) at the time of the ground, is, from the perspective of the aspect of freedom from all obscurations, posited as the dharmakāya. Therefore, ultimate truth alone is posited as the dharmakāya. If one wonders what is wrong with [this view, the answer is] what could be more noxious than saying this! The svabhāvikakāya is explained as the support for the entire range of uncontaminated qualities of buddhahood and as the embodiment that makes the attainment of all uncontaminated qualities possible. But, conversely, the single sheer emptiness as a nonaffirming negation was not claimed to be svabhāvikakāya by the victor and his sons. Therefore, what would be more inappropriate than to make up theories of the embodiments and wisdoms that were never accepted by the victor and his sons?

In fact, the svabhāvikakāya was not posited based on emptiness as sheer negation. It was rather posited from the perspective that the expanse and wisdom are an assembly that cannot be split apart. As it is taught by the victor Ajita [AA VIII.1]:

The svābhāvikakāya of the sage
Has as its defining characteristic the nature of the undefiled dharmas
That are obtained in utter purity.⁵⁵

Thus, in the classification of four kāyas, where the svabhāvikakāya is differentiated from the dharma-kāya, the svabhāvikakāya is posited from the perspective of luminosity which is free from the host of obscurations in which the expanse and wisdom are not separate things. However, according to the classification of three kāyas, the dharma-kāya and the svabhāvikakāya are posited as the dharma-kāya where phenomena (dharmin) and the nature of phenomena (dharma-tā) are not split apart. As the victor Ajita says [RGV II.30]:

The vimuktikāya and the dharma-kāya
Are explained to be of benefit to oneself and others.
These [kāyas] being the support of self-benefit and other-benefit
Are endowed with qualities such as being inconceivable⁵⁶⁵⁷.

Conclusion

When looking at Mi bskyod rdo rje's Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments, it is evident that the main view which thus runs like a thread throughout the entire treatise—whether it is in the context of the sūtric or tantric aspects of view and meditation—is the unity of the two truths, the inseparability of samsāra and nirvāna. To him, this is precisely the intent of the sūtras of the Perfection of Wisdom famously pointed to in the so-called Heart Sūtra through the words 'form is empty, emptiness is form':

Through the equality of existence and nonexistence that is free from all real existence and nonexistence, the mind, which is the inseparability of emptiness and compassion free from obscurations, and its appearances, which do not have a different substance from that, these two—even though they are in no way established as the phenomena of samsāra and nirvāna, as entities and nonentities which [respectively] have obscurations and no [obscurations]—are to be understood as the sameness of the unity of male and female (yab yum), as the two aspects of the appearance of existence and the emptiness of nonexistence respectively with form and without form. This meaning is also [contained] in the mother of victors: 'Form is empty. Emptiness is form. Emptiness is not something different from form. Form is not something different from emptiness.'

Thus, the ever increasing, inexhaustible great ocean of the mysterious inconceivable speech of all buddhas, bodhisattvas, viras, dakinīs and dharma protectors of all the worlds of the ten directions such as the dharmacakra of the ultimate single intent of sūtras and tantras that was perfect-

In voicing his favored views, Mi bskyod rdo rje remains fully in line with Sgam po pa Bsod nams rin chen (1079–1153), the founding father of the Dwags po Bka' brgyud traditions as well as with the Third Karma pa Rang byung rdo rje (1284–1339) who decisively shaped the view and meditation tradition of the Karma Bka' brgyud school. This is obvious from the many references found in the text regarding these two masters. The challenge for Mi bskyod rdo rje was certainly to defend this system against currents of views that, starting in the 14th century, continued to dominate the philosophical landscape of Tibetan Buddhism, foremost among them the views of Tsong kha pa (1357–1419) and his students. Moreover, he clearly and repeatedly demarcates himself from the view of Dol po pa Shes rab rgyal mtshan (1292–1361) and the Jo nang tradition which—as far as explanations of the conventional and the ultimate truth are concerned—forms the extreme counterpart to the Dge lugs pa's system.

Considering the length of Mi bskyod rdo rje's Explanation of the Direct Introduction into the Three Embodiments and the complexity of its topics, it is, in fact, impossible to summarize its meaning and to provide a digest which is truthful to the various subtleties pointed out by the author. Thus it is hoped that this short outline—of what doubtlessly can be counted as one of the most fascinating accounts of Tibetan Buddhist view and meditation practice—inspires more in-
